Tax cheats: a $3B problem

All those little lies add up to a costly whopper

By CAROL GOAR
FP News Service

Tax cheating adds up to a $3 billion a year drain on the national economy.

And most of it comes not from the spectacular headline-making cases, but from the padded expense accounts, cash deals, and "forgetful" omissions on personal tax forms of individual Canadians.

That $3 billion is enough to pay for the entire fleet of 137 fighter planes the federal government announced it was buying this week.

It would easily take care of a year's-worth of federal health-care payments. It would cover the combined cost of running the post office and supplying the country's mothers with family allowances for a year, with a few thousand dollars to spare.

Perhaps most signficant, it would cut the government's $12 billion annual spending deficit by almost a quarter.

Taxation officials figure that for $10 they collect in taxes, there is $1 they should get, but don't.

But they admit their estimate is based more on gut feeling than statistical evidence.

The sort of examples they cite:

— Bill felt faintly guilty the first couple of times he padded his expense account. But when he discovered that most of the other salesmen in the company were routinely inventing out-of-town expenses, it began to seem almost natural to claim for taxis he hadn't actually taken or for some dry-cleaning he hadn't done, and pocket the cash. One of the nicest things about the extra dollars is that they were tax-free.

— When Margaret hired the girl up the street for sweeping out her florist's shop after school, it seemed ridiculous to go through the rigamarole of getting her on the payroll and worrying about health care, unemployment insurance, pension and income tax deductions. So she just handed her cash at the end of her shift. The transaction was invisible to tax officials.

— Lucio liked adding up the day's sales at his corner grocery store a few hours before closing time. If somebody came in after he'd counted his receipts, he'd forget about the cash register and place the cash in his wallet. There was no record of sale for the taxman.

The man who probably knows more tax evasion than anyone in the country is Jim Gourlay, a gruff-voiced tax bureaucrat whose official Revenue Canada title is director general of compliance.

He's been at the job for 30 years. He's supervised several attempts to get a reading on the amount of unreported taxable revenue circulating in the country, but none of the measures have satisifed him.

"The so-called underground economy is certainly there, but I just can't get an accurate handle on it," he said in an interview this week.

"All I can give you is my gut feeling. My honest opinion is that this kind of thing is increasing. I look at people's lifestyles and I know a lot of them must have a second job to keep their head above water. But how do you monitor moonlighting?"

If Gourlay's estimate is accurate, Revenue Canada is in much better shape than the United States Internal Revenue Service when it comes to collecting the taxes it is owed.

A recent survey by Oregon State University showed that 24 per cent of U.S. taxpayers — approximately one in four — admitted to some form of tax evasion.

Most western countries report tax evasion to be on the increase. British newspapers have noted an increase in "fiddling." In France, the phenomenon is known as travail au noir, in Italy, l'economia sommersa, in West Germany scharzarbeit.

North Americans have developed a variety of euphemisms for their unreported economic acitivies: the underground economy, the subterranean economy, moonlighting and the rebirth of the bartering.

In Canada, as in most countries, inflation seems to be the major culprit be-

Stiffer Iranian visa rule

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In another effort to punish Tehran, the administration announced today a new visa policy that could force tens of thousands of Iranians to leave the United States over the next several months.

Iranians in America will no longer receive extensions of temporary visas, nor will they be allowed to become permanent residents, except for "compelling humanitarian reasons," said David Crosland, acting commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

There are an estimated 150,000 Iranians in the country. The new strictures will bear most heavily on tourists, corporate officials and Iranian crewmen. They are not likely immediately to affect some 60,000 students, most of whom have visas with indefinite terms.

Today's move had been expected as another in a series of steps by the administration to pressure Iran to release 50 American hostages being held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran.

Last Monday, President Carter ordered all Iranian diplomats to leave the country, and announced no Iranians would be allowed in except for humanitarian reasons.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said Iran will ask an international organization to handle visits to the U.S. hostages and to keep an eye on their physical condition.

There was no immediate comment from the ambassadors or the militants occupying the U.S. embassy. The militants have said they are discussing with the government ways of handling visits to the captives.

In another development, Abolghassem Sadegh, head of the foreign press section in the national guidance ministry said the Iranian government will no longer approve new applications by U.S. journalists to work in Iran but has not yet decided whether to expel U.S. reporters already in the country.

Ambulance strike vote

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C.'s 550 ambulance drivers, paramedics and dispatchers plan to hold a strike vote after rejecting the latest contract offer from the Emergency Health Services Commission.

The workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, voted 80 per cent to reject a 19-per-cent wage boost over two years.

Union spokesman Ralph Jones said the union is holding out for a 15-per-cent increase in a one-year agreement. No date for the strike vote was announced.

Commission spokesman Gary Moser said no further negotiations are planned.

Moser said any renewed bargaining efforts will be affected by a tentatve settlement negotiated by nurses at the province's 113 general hospitals granting them a 44-per-cent wage increase over 27 months.

Meanwhile, government-employed nurses have welcomed Labor Minister Jack Heinrich's offer to appoint an industrial inquiry commission to settle a contract dispute with the provincial Government Employee Relations Bureau.

And they say they will call off job action if negotiations show progess under the commission.

Heinrich said earlier in the day he is willing to appoint an industrial inquiry commissioner in the nurses' strike if he can get assurances from both sides it will lead to productive mediation and a contract agreement.

Both the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses Association of B.C. had asked the minister to appoint a commissioner to make non-binding recommendations.

"A commission will be an important aid to achieving an agreement by free collective bargaining," the nurses said in a telegram to Heinrich Friday afternoon.

"We are certain that you appreciate our concerns that any recommendations made by the commission must be non-binding."

Link poll results Monday

We asked you last week how you feel about a bridge-cum-tunnel between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

You swamped us. Hundreds and hundreds of Times' readers took time out to send in their opinions.

The results of our fixed link poll are being double-checked over the weekend and will be published along with a broad selection of the many comments respondents added to their yes-no coupons.

It's interesting stuff and it may just surprise you. Read it Monday.

Eggs going up

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers will get an extra one cent a dozen for their eggs starting Monday, the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency announced Friday.

Higher interest rates and operating charges pushed up the cost of production formula that sets the prices farmers get for their eggs.

Liberia coup: Tolbert shot

MONROVIA (CP) — Liberian President William Tolbert was assassinated early today during a coup staged by a group of non-commissioned officers, the official Radio Liberia said.

Sporadic shooting was heard this afternoon in the centre of Monrovia, Liberia's capital, but it was not known whether there was any resistance to the coup or whether there was any fighting prior to the seizure of the Presidential Palace.

The non-commissioned officers are calling themselves the People's Redemption Council.

The ambassadors of the United States and the Soviet Union were summoned to the Presidential Palace "at once" to meet the leader of the coup, Sgt. Samuel K. Do, Radio Liberia reported.

Do told the Liberian news agency that the coup had become necessary because of rampant corruption in the country, and because of the continued failure of the government to handle the affairs of the Liberian people effectively.

"We had no other alternative but to overthrow the government," Do was quoted as saying. He told the news agency that the council will conduct the affairs of government until a decision on future action is reached.

It was the first coup in Liberia since the West African state was founded by former U.S. slaves 133 years ago. Tolbert and his government were one of the West's closest allies in Africa.

Radio Liberia said the council has "assured foreigners that everything is under control."

A doctor at the Presidential Palace told reporters that Tolbert was shot three times in the head when the rebels broke into the palace at 1 a.m.

The coup took the country by surprise, as there had been no reports of unrest until the shooting broke out early today.

Don't look for magic on housing

OTTAWA (CP) — Families struggling to meet monthly housing payments and builders and workers facing a dramatic slump in construction will be looking to the federal government Monday for prescriptions for their financial ailments.

But the speech from the throne opening the new session of Parliament is more likely to signal short-term remedies for those suffering the greatest pain than any magic cure for housing problems in general. Specific legislation would come later.

CMHC estimates that roughly 350,000 mortgages held by lending institutions are up for renewal this year.

Housing Minister Paul Cosgrove has all but ruled out any sweeping and expensive new government programs in housing.

Two distinct but related problems have attracted the most attention: relief for homeowners whose mortgages are up for renewal at substantially higher interest rates and a decline in housing starts likely to be the worst in more than a decade.

Cosgrove has already announced help for some 2,000 homeowners with mortgages taken out in the early months of the Assisted Home Ownership Program and up for renewal within the next year.

Any assistance to other homeowners is expected to follow the same general approach. That would mean short-term assistance limited to those in the most dire circumstances, perhaps 30,000 households.

The second major problem facing Cosgrove, a slump in housing construction, is every bit as serious as the problem of mortgage renewals and probably affects a much larger group of Canadians.

Cosgrove has received numerous suggestions on how to deal with the situation: reviving tax breaks for those who invest in new rental construction, committing more federal funds to non-profit and co-operative housing, and subsidizing interest rates for those buying homes.

The minister appears most impressed by a proposal from the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada to reduce the mortgage rate this year to 12 per cent for those buying new or existing houses.

It will not be known until Monday whether cabinet is prepared to accept even a modified version of the association's plan.

From criminal to crime expert

By DEREK SIDENIUS

For his first 40 years or so Ray Johnson lived the life of a hardened criminal.

The California native started at the tender age of 10 stealing cars and by the time he was 15 was branded a psychopathic delinquent.

In his late teens he extended his adventures in crime to robbery and burgarly and as the years passed wound up a drug addict.

All told, he spent 15 years in various jails and institutions and has the dubious distinction of being the only maximum security prisoner ever to escape the notorious Folsom Prison.

That escape precipitated one of the largest police manhunts in California's history. When he was recaptured, he was thrown into isolation where he languished for the next five years.

It was likely the best thing that ever happened to Johnson.

He began to wonder what he had done with his life and vowed when he got out he'd change his ways and try to make sure others didn't follow his former path.

Johnson kept that vow. Today, aged 54, he is one of the top crime prevention experts in the U.S.

His story has appeared in every major magazine and newspaper in the country.

He has been on countless television and radio talk shows. Last month he was a guest on the Johnny Carson show — for the 37th time in the past decade.

On Monday, Johnson will be in Victoria to speak at a crime prevention seminar for businessmen held at Delta's Laurel Point Inn and sponsored jointly by Greater Victoria police, the Victoria Chamber of Commerce and Victoria Times.

In an interview this week from Dallas, Texas, where he was visiting as a consultant to the Southland Corporation, owners of the 7-11 convenience store chain, Johnson gave his formula for cracking down on crime:

Get the private sector involved in finding ways of making it more difficult for persons to commit crimes.

Johnson applied that principle to Southlands and the outcome has been dramatic — a 20 per cent reduction in robberies nationally, 50 to 60 per cent in some areas.

Johnson said most crimes against small businesses are perpetrated by younger people who have a warped view of what crime and delinquency are all about.

"In my day you pulled a job to make money, a lot of money. You didn't want to hurt anyone in the process and you never went after the little guy."

But today the little guy is often the victim. Johnson blames television, in part, for making it look so easy.

Johnson said police haven't a hope of tackling the problem unless private business begins to minimize the risks.

The would-be robbers, too, have to get the message that "if they play they're going to pay in one way or another."

His own situation is a case in point, he said. Even though he has been granted a full pardon for past deeds he still has to get a special ministerial pass to enter Canada.

His stay here is limited in time and restricted in travel. At the border he'll be stopped and queried and looked on with suspicion.

"I don't enjoy being treated that way," he said. "But that's how it is."

All those little tax lies undercutting economy hind the rise in tax evasion.

As people's grocery bills and mortgage payments impose an ever-heavier burden on their strained household budget, their resentment at seeing a large chunk of their pay go to Ottawa intensifies.

"There's a growing feeling in some parts of the public that they don't like the way the government is spending is their money. So they look for ways to avoid paying taxes."

Tax evasion also seems to be a manifestation of changing attitudes toward law and government.

"I think there's a decreasing morality in society," Gourlay says. "I'm not saying that my generation doesn't cheat on taxes, but I think a smaller percentage does and I think our generation would do it and wear a hairshirt about short-changing the government. Today's generation doesn't seem to feel as guilty."

Peter Gutmann, an economics professor at City University of New York, who has spent the last three years exploring tax evasion in the U.S. says: "A new generation of workers has brought with it a new morality in which tax evasion is no longer the moral disgrace it once was and has become almost socially acceptable."

The Canadian tax department insists it makes a determined effort each year to catch up with those who don't pay their share of taxes.

In recent years, it has gone out of its way to attract press attention to cases of flagrant tax evasion in the hope that the publicity will convince Canadians tempted to cheat that those who do often get caught.

This ominous warning is featured in the department's most recent publication, Inside Taxation: "Individuals who have attempted to defraud the government of tax have discovered that the odds of getting caught are greater than one might think."

Revenue Canada has a field force of 530 investigators out looking for tax evaders. Between April 1, 1978, and March 31, 1979, the department investigated 949 suspected cases of tax evasion and levied $30 million in penalties.

Those sound like big numbers until one recalls that there are 14.2 million Canadians who filed tax returns last year (this year's figures will not be avaiable till June). Total income tax payments amounted to $24.9 billion.

Gourlay admits the problem is mushrooming faster than his trusty little band of snoops can begin to cope with it.

"What can we do? Check out every gas station, every restaurant, every babysitter, every doctor and dentist in the country?"

"The problem, really, is individual greed and I don't know what governments do when people don't want to pay the shot for running the country."

the weather

A ridge of high pressure across the interior and a disturbance offshore moved very little overnight. As a result only high thin clouds were reported over most of B.C. while cloudy and wet weather continued over the Charlottes and north coast. As the systems are forecast to move only slowly eastward little change in the weather pattern is forecast today. Sunday will see the ridge move eastwards into Alberta, allowing cloud and some shower activity to push slowly cross the province from the west.

Fumes of overflowing acid send 5 workers to hospital

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — A cloud of noxious hydrochloric acid fumes sent five sawmill workers to hospital Friday when a holding tank of the acid at a neighboring chemical plant was overfilled.

The five men were admitted to hospital suffering from respiratory complaints when they were overcome by the fumes while working at Nova Lumber Co. Ltd. about 200 metres east of ERCO Industries Ltd. near the north end of the Second Narrows Bridge, RCMP said.

They were later released. One of the victims, McDonald, 22, said gas from the plant has leaked several times in the past.

Sawmill plant superintendent Bill Olson, said the plant was shut down after the gas cloud hit.

About 75 workers were sent home, but the plant re-opened for the afternoon shift.

"We've had the odd smell, but we've never had to shut it down before," he said. "It kind of chokes you, (causing) watery eyes, running noses, hard breathing."

W. H. Keir, plant manager of ERCO Industries Ltd., said the accident occurred when a holding tank of hydrochloric acid was overfilled and caused a malfunction in the plant's machinery.

The acid, Keir said, is pumped in from Hooker Chemicals Ltd., directly west of ERCO Industries, and is used to control the acidity levels in ERCO's process in manufacturing sodium chlorate.

Sodium chlorate is a bleaching agent used in making pulp and paper.

He said the overflow went undetected for five to 10 minutes.

Plant workers were trying to determine the cause behind the overfill and the amount of excess acid, Keir said.

Keir said there were no injuries within ERCO's plant. He said he did not know of any similar accidents in the past at the plant.

Firefighters and police set up road blocks around the danger area for several hours.

James Bell, acting mayor of North Vancouver District, said the accident "scares the hell out of me." Bell lives two kilometres away from the accident site.

"I feel confident everything was handled in a proper manner and hope we don't blow this incident out of all proportion," he said. "It's the first time ERCO has had such an incident and they've been here for 20-odd years."

Stranded Iranians sheltered

VANCOUVER (CP) — Iranian architecture students from the United States, caught here on a field trip when President Carter slammed the door on Iranians seeking to enter or re-enter the U.S., have been given a temporary haven at the Vancouver School of Theology at University of B.C.

The five University of Idaho students moved into one of three school residences Friday.

"We originally said they could stay only until Sunday, but then we found we could extend their stay until Thursday if necessary," said Dr. Jim Martin, theology school principal.

After that, he said, the space is booked by out-of-town students.

Martin said he believes the University of Idaho is paying for the rooms.

"At least I would hope so," he said. "I believe the university paid for their rooms when they were staying at a downtown hotel."

U.S. Consulate spokesman Tom Marquis said Friday it could be more than a month before the stranded students find out if they will be allowed to return to university in the U.S.

"A regular visa application can take between 20 and 30 days to process," he said.

Bureaucracy stifles initiative, say chiefs

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's native people will never climb out of the welfare rut as long as they have to support a wasteful and unimaginative federal department of Indian affairs bureaucracy, the Union of B.C. Indian Chiefs said Friday.

Union president George Manuel told a news conference that B.C.'s Indian bands are spearheading a national campaign to eliminate the regional department offices and apply the money saved directly to the bands.

Manuel said department staff salaries and other costs in B.C. amount to $2.6 million a year, which could be spent encouraging development of small job-creating businesses on the reserves.

"The money should be sent directly from Ottawa to the bands," he said. This would eliminate the need for the department to have regional administrative costs."

Manuel said federal policy is to pour money into welfare payments, which maintain the status quo, while short-changing the economic development programs which could lead to self-sufficiency.

He said B.C.'s 194 bands are being given an average of $140,000 for welfare, but only $15,500 for economic development.

"With that kind of allocation, we will be on welfare forever," he said. "We are smothered by welfare. It's a crushing, uphill battle."

He said direct funnelling of funds to bands would provide native people with an opportunity to learn from their mistakes, by developing business skills on small-scale projects, such as irrigation improvement on individual farms or construction of simple shelters for tourists.

Meanwhile, Nishga Indian chiefs got authorization at their tribal convention in Vancouver this week to use any legal means open to them to halt the reopening of the Kitsault molybdenum mine.

The resolution was passed after MP Jim Fulton, New Democrat member for Skeena, said a federal order-in-council and a provincial pollution permit will allow the mine to discharge poisonous emissions at a rate 10,000 to 15,000 times more than allowed elsewhere in Canada.

Schroeder gains

Harvey Schroeder, speaker of the B.C. legislature, is not expected back at work for at least two months, Social Credit whip George Mussallem said today.

Schroeder suffered a heart attack Sunday and is recovering in hospital in his hometown of Chilliwack.

Mussallem said Schroeder's condition is improving but he doesn't expect Schroeder back during this session of the legislature, which means the government's majority is reduced to three.

Walter Davidson will continue to handle Schroeder's duties as speaker.

Lawyer Mickey Moran dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mickey Moran, a prominent Castlegar lawyer and a key figure in recent accusations against the provincial deputy attorney-general of tampering with the course of justice, died Friday after a long illness.

Moran was in his late 50s, and had been a member of the B.C. bar since 1949.

In a March 6 television report, the CBC accused deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel of using his influence to help Moran, a longtime friend, escape prosecution on impaired driving charges.

Vogel was subsequently cleared of the accusations by Attorney-General Allan Wiliiams.

The CBC said Moran was charged with impaired driving and refusing to take a breath analysis test after he was involved in a car accident March 14, 1978.

The broadcast claimed that Vogel was behind a move to substitute the charges with the lesser count of dangerous driving, to which Moran pleaded guilty and was granted an absolute discharge.

The Crown tried to appeal, but it was dropped on Vogel's orders.

Funeral arrangements for Moran have not been announced.

Victoria's convention centre is no longer a fait accompli.

For the past year, since city council agreed in principle to support a centre and the province agreed to provide capital funding for it, convention centre plans have rolled along like the traditional juggernaut.

The progress of the centre has doubtless been briskly efficient, but it has also been darkly secretive. No opportunities have been given for either the public or their elected representatives to discuss siting, design or financial arrangements. The design has changed several times without the public being any the wiser. The concepts of providing food stores, small shops, a maritime museum, a "people place" for Victorians along with the convention centre have all vanished into the silence. Costs have risen; funding formulas have changed; leases have been drawn up, all with no public or city input.

That has now changed — not because of any change of heart by the PCC or the Victoria businessmen but because of the discovery that the waterfront Reid site must be rezoned for the centre. The discovery means that the question of siting must go to an open meeting of the city's Advisory Planning Commission and then to a public hearing by all city council.

This may be the last chance the Victoria public and council will have to consider whether the Reid site is the best possible site for a convention centre. Once the earth is turned, that key piece of waterfront will be unalterably alienated by the two convention theatres and surrounding concrete landscaping.

Reports prepared during the past couple of years by the APC and by architects do not show conclusively that the Reid site is the best place to put the centre. They suggest a site behind the rejuvenated Crystal Gardens, on the current Empress Hotel parking lot, or on Ship Point may be at least as good and probably better.

They note that even the best designed building is going to hamper the waterfront views from Wharf Street and Bastion Square, that, of the four locations considered, the Reid site is the furthest from major hotels and from public transportation, and that serious traffic problems may develop around the Wharf-Yates intersection.

The site's only great advantage appears to be that the province is willing to give it up for the centre for the sum of $1.

The APC and city council should consider the weaknesses of the site very carefully. They should be sure that no other sites would better accommodate a centre.

Victoria has been waiting 80 years and more for a centre. The city can afford to wait another few weeks if that it what it takes to ensure that the centre is built in the best possible location.

Lesson in constructive revolt

By Barnett Singer

The Holocaust has been explained by many writers, but it still deserves a close look, especially by the young. For we may soon encounter new horrors of a similar kind.

Swienciany was a town in Lithuania, some 60 miles from Vilna. One-third of its 9,000 inhabitants were Jews (before 1939) and in surrounding shtetles the proportion was also high. Here the Jews had a thriving cultural live — a Hebrew renaissance, theatre, athletic clubs, and so on. Above all, most must have been decent citizens — family-oriented, hospitable, regular in habits.

No escape

Suddenly came World War II. With a Soviet invasion in the fall of 1939, all Jewish clubs were closed, curricula were filled with Marxist content, and private business was at an end. Soviet border patrols soon made it difficult to escape from the area.

But the surrounding lake country was still beautiful, and life went on blissfully, compared to what ensued. For on June 22, 1941, the Germans made a sweep with 150 divisions toward the Soviet Union. For Jews there was nowhere to go. Much of Eastern Europe would quickly become a "Holocaust Kingdom".

Swienciani, with its surrounding villages, soon contained some 7,000 Jewish people, and in the fall of 1941 the Germans, along with Lithuanian police, made almost all of them march to what was called the Polygon in the countryside. En route some faltered and were shot.

At the Polygon the marchers were herded under blows and shooting into a large pen. It was now Oct. 6, 1941, the day coinciding with the Jewish harvest festival called Succot. On this day men and women and children were separated. Security police, mostly Lithuanian, were given liquor and, during the night, peasants were enlisted to dig trenches, while others were allowed to loot Jewish homes in town.

Now in groups of 50 these thousands were shot down, tumbling into the pits. Many children and infants were thrown in alive. These Jews of Swienciany — whether mean or generous, petty or noble, Zionist or Communist — were gone forever; and only a handful would ultimately escape and survive. The town itself became a Jewish ghost town.

I relate this episode not in order to turn stomachs. I do so realizing that many historical events have it beaten in statistical horror.

No, I relate this to show what history can do so rapidly, and what it may do again. We are entering perilous times. While we live normal lives it is hard to feel the imminence of dislocation; but let Saudi Arabia fall, as it can do, or the New York Exchange crash, as it can do, or even worse events happen, and how will we react? Who will survive?

Really no one can tell. Those few, however, who made it out of Swienciany to the woods and the very few Jews who then survived were generally young people. Imbued with faith. Hard workers. Skilled at something technical. Inventive. Multilingual, and able to make contacts with other people. Lucky, too. But what I want to stress most is their ability to defy the conventions of family, and of older, more cautious people.

This is a relevant message for today. Sometimes when I talk to a bright teenager I wish to say: "Forget planning ten more years of education for a career in law. Forget pleasing your parents. Go after something you consider worthwhile, and do it now." Too many youths, mature beyond their years, languish on high school benches, and our society can ill afford this postponement of maturity.

Easy to lecture

In general it is time not to follow the old conventions — better to learn an attitude of constructive revolt. Of course it is easier to lecture than to do, and when I read about the Holocaust I am certain I would have perished with the rest.

But the message is mainly for the young who still have energy and lack of family responsibilities to take chances. A great historical change may come, and they should be orienting themselves to this possibility.

What is awaiting Canada

VANCOUVER — Wow, Dr Fothe., am I ever in luck bumping into you.

What, my good person-body might I help you with?

Well, gee, with Parliament finally opening on Monday, unveiling to us the rich, country goodness of yet another Liberal 25 years in power, it would be nice to know what awaits us.

Naturally. The first crucial test will come Monday morning. It will set the tone for the next four years.

And what's that?

Starts to snore

Well, watch Pierre E Reincarnation closely while Governor-General Edward Schreyer reads the Throne Speech. If he falls asleep, you'll know we're in trouble.

Why is that?

Because, dummy, Reincarnation wrote the speech hinself,(actually, one of his more dull factotums did). The prime minister, as you know, almost falls asleep when he has to read his text on the campaign trail or in the House of Commons. He seems to have a short attention span these days, mind on other things, namely his pension cheque, and seems distracted, perhaps wondering why Walter Baker got him into all this. If he starts to snore while Schreyer reads it will be apt criticism, but trouble for the land.

Say, is that true what I hear that the Gee Gee, Mr.Schreyer, has set out to read all 19 volumes of the encyclopedia, attempting to break the record of nine years set by a Manitoba judge who had a lot of time — and eyeglasses — on his hands?

It's true. The Gee Gee, you see, had to read so many Throne Speeches in these days of frequent elections that he felt his mind might turn to mush. For a higher literary quality, and in hopes of finding some erotic detail, he turned to the encyclopedia in desperation.

And is it right that his Excellency has been out personally tapping the maple sugar trees on the Rideau Hall estate?

There are a lot of saps in Ottawa at this time of year; some of them inevitably wander through Government House.

Okay. Let's get serious. Are the Reincarnates really going to make a decision about the Olympic Boycott?

Certainly. About the same time they bring in the Freedom of Information bill. What you've got to realize is that you never get to rule this country forever by being bold; the philosopher-king really is Mackenzie King. If I were you and wanted to plot the future of the nation I'd watch the SPCA.

Why?

The day he buys a dog, we'll know he'll be there until the day Suzanne Perry gets her Golden Ages free pass on the bus.

Who's Suzanne Perry?

You know, the press aide you see on The National every night. The one with the pouty good looks of Jane Fonda and the tongue of Dorthy Parker. You can tell she's earmarked for success in the Prime Minister's Office.

How's that?

Never answers her phone calls. Obviously a comer.

Speaking of the National, what's going to happen when the CBC switches the news to 10 p.m.?

Simple, it will have a tremendous effect on the sex life.

Knowlton's?

No, no, the nation's. Here you've got a country that for decades hasn't been able to fall into horizontal delights until Holy Mother Corp. gives us our news injection at 11 p.m. The thought of an entire land hitting the sack at 10 p.m. is going to be the greatest boon to hospital construction since the New York blackout,

Is there any truth to the rumor that Joe Clark exists?

Strange allies

He does, actually, but he wishes he didn't, comtemplating a Commons in which he has Bob Coates and Tom Cossitt as allies.

Who's Bob Coates?

Well, he's the president of the Conservative Party with the looks of Dorthy Parker and the tongue of Jane Fonda. He thinks his leader, Mr. Clark, is a bit of a twerp, but usually doesn't say these things unless a microphone is close.

I see, so what you're saying is that it's the same old ball game, Mr. P.E. Reincarnation doped into slumber by the juices of his own intellect and Mr. Clark nervously alive peering about for the switchblade.

You've got it. And keep an eye on that dog.

Proposition Nine

A 10-day holiday in the southwestern U.S. leaves a raft of impressions of politics south of the border. A few tidbits:

One of the most interesting developments is the continuing growth of the limit-taxes movement in California. Two years ago Californians voted in favor of a referendum to restrict property taxes drastically, a move called Proposition 13.

This fall Californians will vote on Proposition Nine, which would place similar restrictions on the level of personal income taxes that the state government could levy. The general expectation appears to be that Proposition Nine will pass, but its opponents are greatly concerned about the effect it would have on the most basic of public services.

The effects of Proposition 13, they say, have been limited somewhat by the fact that surpluses of the state government have been given as grants to municipalities to make up in part for the revenue lost from property taxes. If Proposition Nine passes, however, those grants will have to stop and state-provided services will also be affected.

The public schools have been most hurt by Proposition 13, and stand to be most hurt by Proposition Nine, it appears. Parents and teachers point out that already "frill" subjects such as art and music have been cut from many school programs. In some districts, including some with no public transit systems, all school buses have stopped running, and parents have been forced to organize car pools to get their children three miles and more to school.

A number of Californians pointed out that these restrictions hit hardest at the people who can least afford it. In affluent suburbs of Los Angeles and San Francisco, parents have banded together to provide funds to keep afloat programs that they see as valuable. But in the poorer districts, no money is available from the children's families, and the children have been reduced to receiving the most basic education. Money to help children with special learning problems has also been reduced, and that too tends to hit hardest at the poorer neighborhoods.

But even in affluent Beverley Hills, one of the great concerns is that if Proposition Nine passes, the school district will have to cut back on the number of security guards in its high schools.

As the U.S. presidential campaign heads into its final months, it becomes apparent that American voters feel no more positively toward any of the leading candidates than Canadians felt toward Pierre Trudeau or Joe Clark. They will be choosing the man whom they perceive to be the least of evils rather than one who they think might actually make a good president.

Incumbent President Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan are seen as the top two contenders for the job, but neither is well thought of.

Carter is perceived as a bumbler, a man whose domestic policies have led the U.S. very close to economic chaos, with inflation predicted this year at 18 per cent and interest rates now having reached 20 per cent.

Reagan? "He looks better now because he hasn't had to tackle the problems," one Arizonan said. "But his policy is just as weak, as woolly and as full of holes as Carter's really." He is given credit by some Californians for having been "tough" as governor of their state, for having clamped down on state spending and on the high wage demands of public servants.

Of the other contenders, Ted Kennedy appears to be distrusted as much as the U.S. polls say he is, and George Bush is perceived as having no clear policy on a number of key issues. Republican John Anderson is seen as the most interesting — and perhaps most straightforward — candidate, but few Americans expect he has any real chance of becoming president.

Americans on the whole seem pleased that Trudeau was returned to power in Canada. "Now that you've got Trudeau back, is he going to solve some of your problems?" was a frequently asked question.

Despite his domestic failings, Trudeau is still seen outside the country as a statesman. Clark was seen, to a significant degree, as a bumbler, not dissimilar to Carter.

The marriage issue

BOSTON — She is going to get married.

This is not an announcement, you understand. It is, rather, her statement of intent. The poet has honorable intentions.

In fact, she has been going to get married for years now, almost since her divorce. Often across the telephone line that connects one coast and one life to another, the poet has talked out loud to the journalist about singleness as if she were a transient, somehow awkwardly living "between" marriages.

Tonight she says: "If things work out, we'll get married."

The journalist asks her, "Shall I call the caterer?" and they both laugh through the transcontinental echo. You see, they have been here before.

The poet has said three times in six years, "If things work out, we'll get married." The man in her plural has changed. But not her goal . . . and not her single status.

So, with a sigh of self-recognition, she tells the journalist, "Don't buy a dress yet." There is a pause, while the two friends think in tandem.

The poet is the same skeptic who once wrote a rhyme about the headlines that range like graffitti over wedding announcements: "Woman Has Nuptials." They sound, she said, like parts of the anatomy.

Moreover, this woman has not lived like those emotional migrants who set up tents, desperately trying to end their refugee life. She has rested with her children and her life quite comfortably.

The poet knows the difference between the times you have to compromise and the times when you are compromised. She won't discount her needs to bargain in the marriage market.

Nevertheless she is a single woman committed to the ideal marriage. She is going to get married. Someday. The two talk on and on, defying the telephone company, which promised them economy at night rates.

The journalist is not at all sure that her friend wants to mate again and tells her so. There are times she thinks the poet is merely appeasing the gods of her upbringing by assuring them that she, too, wants what she was taught to want. She wonders if the poet is making a bargain — a promise to remarry in the future in return for living as she chooses in the present.

The poet wonders, too. She sees marriage as the question that demands to be answered, even though she knows from experience and observation that it may answer very little.

She knows that marriage carries a weight of its own in our world. If divorce is the context in which we live out our fragile marriages, marriage is the state against which people judge our non-marriages.

It may be all quite mad, says the poet; but marriage is simply there. It is hard, she says, to be unaffected by its powerful presence.

The poet reminds her friend of the times they have told each other, "Everyone we know either gets married or splits." Perhaps it is true; perhaps it is a truism. But it carries with it a self-fulfilling anxiety.

There is just no way to ignore it, says the poet.

The parents of her students get nervous when the children who are living together "pre-maritally" show no signs of marrying. Her sister asks about her newest love, "How serious is it?' Only marriage is "serious." Every other relationship is, by our social definitions, one which "hasn't worked out yet."

The poet and the journalist have known men who matter more to them than those they were related to by titles. But society takes titles more "seriously" than feelings. An older friend of theirs loved a woman. But when she died, he had no place to mourn. He was not, you see, a widower.

It is odd, living in the State of Flux, with marriages ending in divorces ending in remarriages. No one knows whether the constant is togetherness or aloneness.

The poet on the West Coast believes in the possibility of polishing and perfecting. The journalist on the East Coast believes this: If it is working, don't fix it.

They both see the way the Marriage Issue turns a couple into a menage a trois: she and he and The Question. The journalist tries to ignore it, which may be absurd. The poet tries to accept it, which may be equally absurd.

Later, after they have spent their budgets and their insights over this long distance, the journalist thinks about her friend's last words: "There is something in me that believes marriage is a more complete commitment. When I look at married people, I don't see it often, yet I keep believing it. What do you do with that?"

Maybe what you do is plan to get married. When, of course, "everything" works out.

Subverting the process of natural selection

The manipulation of the wilderness

By BILL CLARK

(Clark is a naturalist and vice-president of Friends of Animals. He wrote this for The New York Times)

With such an abundance of life forms constantly reproducing ever-varying offspring, nature must introduce a limiting factor. This is natural selection. It is a rather complex and highly selective process that favors and protects individuals that have genetic heritage and mutations that better adapt them to their environment. Individuals that have genetic heritage and mutations that do not adapt well usually die young.

This process insures that the "fittest" animals survive to reproduce and pass their better-adapted genes to the next generation. Natural selection, then, is nature's way of refining life, making it more sensitive, skillful, intelligent and healthy.

When a hunter, armed with a high-powered weapon and equipped with a frightful assortment of hunting accoutrements, enters a wildlife habitat, the process of natural selection is subverted. He carries with him lethal instruments that have not evolved with the wild animals of the region. The "fitness" of individual animals facing a human hunter rarely influences the outcome of the confrontation.

If anything, the hunter is usually most inclined to kill the fitter animal. Given the choice, a hunter kills a big, healthy, trophy buck rather than a small, unhealthy and scrawny animal.

The hunter, therefore, does not replace the large predators, such as the wolves and mountain lions, which he killed off in the last century. These predators worked within the processes of natural selection and helped eliminate the "unfit" individuals, thus contributing to the general fitness of the ecosystem. Human hunters, by seeking the "fittest" individuals, function in a contrary manner, flouting natural selection and contributing to the general degeneration of the ecosystem.

Multiply this counterproductive process by about 18 million hunters raiding the wilderness and seeking to kill the best animals year after year, decade after decade, century after century, and you can appreciate the grave implications American wildlife faces at the hands of gunslingers who like to call themselves "sportsmen."

The tragedy does not end here, however. Hunters know that relatively few elements have great influence on wildlife populations. In most cases, the availability of food and habitat is all that's necesary for wild animals. When food and habitat are abundant, wild populations respond with increased birth rates. When these elements decrease, so does the birth rate.

The hunting fraternity uses this knowledge to artificially stimulate the populations of certain species they want to shoot. Deer, for example, prefer low-growing "browse vegetation" for eating, and the "edge" between forest and meadow for habitat.

Consequently, hunters, whose licence fees are used to pay salaries for bureaucrats on fish and game commissions, influence those commissions to manipulate wilderness habitat so it will stimulate the deer birthrate. Thus, more than one million acres of public land are manipulated every year. Tall, mature forests are clear-cut and bulldozed to provide space for that low growing browse and forest edge. The crowns of mature forsts are sprayed with chemical herbicides so the high vegetation will wither away. Sunlight then penetrates to the forest floor, stimulating more low-growing browse. The deer population responds to these manipulations with predictable increases.

There are myriad other techniques to manipulate wilderness so it will stimulate increases in particular species of wild animals. With such stimulations, the populations of target animals — usually deer, rabbit, waterfowl and other hunted animals — skyrocket. Hunters then cry "overpopulation" and fish and game commissions respond by increasing the hunting season's bag limit or the season's length.

But for every acre converted to deer habitat, there is an acre of habitat taken from some other creature. As might be expected, some of our most endangered wildlife species prefer to inhabit mature ecosystems — the kinds hunters destroy in the quest for more targets.

An ironic element is that most of this manipulation is being done under the auspices of the U.S. Federal Aid to Wildlife Restoration Act. Wild animals are being restored that are already most abundant, while virtually ignored are those that are precariously endangered. If as much money was spent encouraging the American bald eagle population as is spent forcing increases in the deer birthrate, almost every American would soon have the opportunity to view this majestic bird flying freely.

It is obvious that the hunters, and their apologists in the country's various fish and game commissions, have little respect for the natural processes of wilderness. They continually subvert the processes of natural selection, and at the same time they manipulate wilderness for their own selfish desires. They press for quantity of particular species at the expense of quality of individual animals and the balances of nature.

And they call this "sport."

THE VANCOUVER SUN

It isn't that we don't believe Science Minister Pat McGeer's magic tunnel to Vancouver Island is technically feasible, you understand. It's just that, despite the increased interest brought about by Easter lineups at the ferry terminals, we still find it hard to take the idea seriously.

For one thing, since the major problem with the B.C. Ferry system is cars, not people, can a serious alternative really be a tunnel, another way to pander to the automobile?

Let's say, just for argument's sake, the tunnel is built and drivers can whisk themselves to Vancouver Island in 30 minutes instead of the three hours it takes now. Won't that be amazingly popular? Isn't it likely that a tunnel built on today's projections of traffic volume would be obsolete tomorrow, before we have even finished paying for it.?

The alternatives to the tunnel sound so prosaic. That's their main shortcoming. No sex appeal. No engineering marvel. Nothing to compete with Japan's enthusiastic tunnelling between Honshu and Hokkaido. Nothing unique to show off at Transpo, the world transportation fair Vancouver would like to hold in 1986.

But is the provincial government really going to barge ahead, so to speak, with a questionable tunnel project just to save face at one festival? Is the government really prepared to equate Japanese transportation and population problems with ours?

Is it too much to ask for a simple, sensible solution, such as decent public transportation links at both ends of the ferry system?

As it stands now, the bus system is unwieldy both here and there. Infrequent trips are the norm, as are long, arduous milk runs for those who would travel to northern Vancouver Island. The Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway between Victoria and Courtenay, an alternative for some passengers, has been threatened with abandonment and locals charge that the track is falling into disrepair.

The originator of the tunnel proposal, former Socred deregulation minister Sam Bawlf, talked of a railway tunnel.

Why bother with the tunnel? Certainly not just to carry freight, gas, and electricity, all of which can be adequately accommodated by other means and don't need a tunnel any more than a flat-deck Ford needs to travel on a conveyor belt.

Why not just assure foot passengers on B.C. Ferries — whose numbers would undoubtedly grow under these conditions — of regular, swift service on first-rate railway and bus systems at both ends?

That might take care of another problem and one that promises to be the most significant for any tunnel proposal: local resistance.

Residents, who have shown a fondness for even the inadequate E&N service, would probably be as delighted with improved public transportation as would potential ferry foot passengers.

The government could kill two birds with one stone. And at the same time it could show a little social responsibility and kill an idea that gets more unbelievable by the day.

Letters to the editor

False premise

I seriously doubt that the devaluation of the dollar is or ever was helpful in promoting exports of Canadian commodities as outlined in Mr. Bouey's statement as governor of the Bank of Canada.

It is an incredible assumption that a businessman would not increase his prices and his profits by taking advantage of a currency devaluation. With a devaluation, he can increase his price without changing the price that the importer in the U.S. has been paying. Are there many businessmen naive enough to miss this? I believe that the 15 per cent increase in exports is directly attributable to Canadian exporters increasing their prices. It would certainly seem to be a significant figure.

Of course, there should have been some exporters who promoted Canadian goods at lower prices, but Canadian firms have been notorious for not gaining new markets. Some of our basic export prices such as lumber, mining, fishing, beef, should be easy enough to verify. Unfortunately for Canadians, it would seem that most of these commodities have increased in price (to Canadians) to the U.S. dollar equivalent. Thus we pay 15 per cent more (with a regular mark-up more like 22½ per cent) for imported and domestic products.

All of this can be read as conjecture (or as an accomplished fact) without consequence unless the government is basing some of its economic policies on what surely must be a false premise. The day our government starts selling wheat and gold at Canadian prices not adjusted to the U.S. dollar value (they would certainly export more) will be the day I start considering whether I could be wrong. — Martin L. Sweny, 3341 Doncaster Drive.

Name change

Now that the real Crystal Garden is back in operation perhaps our city fathers will consent to change the name of the pool on Quadra Street. As the building is located in Central Park an appropriate name might be "Central Pool". The important thing is that it should not be confused, in the minds of our visitors, with the beautiful rejuvenated Crystal which will long be a credit to Victoria. — A. Southwell, 2242 Arbutus Road.

No trust

Statements attributed to Mr. A. Carle of the I.W.A. in your story "Sick Leave Input Urged" (Times, April 3) deserve immediate reply. In urging that the medical professional sit down with organized labor to come to an agreement about sickness certificates because "I don't think the doctors understand our problems" indicates certainly that he has missed the doctors' point.

From the point of view of this family doctor the whole matter of sickness certificates is part of the ongoing conflict between labor and management and the doctors are being used as referees or arbitrators. Management demands the form in the belief that this kind of harassment might make workers stay off sick less often and unions use the form to "prove" the worker is honest and deserving of compensation. The doctor feels placed in the position of a referee in the middle of the conflict.

Actually there is no "new" policy being introduced. But because of a terrific increase in the numbers of demands for certificates in the fairly recent past doctors are beginning to apply guidelines that have always been there.

Until recently, certificates were only occasionally asked for. Recently, however, we have felt this courtesy has been abused. Workers come in after a few days' minor illness at home which has been perfectly well and appropriately self-treated. They say their boss or their union contract demands a paper. First of all if the boss won't take their word for it why should the doctor? The boss probably knows him better. The boss probably saw him sick before he went home, in fact. Secondly, he is no longer ill.

The medical plan is quite clear about not paying for visits for people who are not sick and also about not paying for forms.

The time it takes is the reason there is a fee. The average fee is $10.50 but the actual fee charged may vary depending on the length and complexity of the form. Also it should be understood that anybody asking for a form is asking for my opinion. That's all I've got to sell in this life and a lot of education and experience goes into it. In today's economy I'm getting more and more reluctant to give it away frivolously.

So, Mr. Carle, if management won't take the worker's word that he has been home in bed three days with the flu and if the union wants to prove something to management I would suggest that labor and management agree in each plant on a referee who can run around to the homes of sick workers and make sure they are there and are sick. You'll get just as good information and you can let me get on with treating those who really need my services. If this idea is repugnant to you both then maybe you'll just have to trust each other. — Dr. L. C. H. Ireland, 101-777 Blanshard Street.

Hindsight

About the current controversy over development in the Victoria Waterfront area.

As a resident of the Greater Victoria area of some 30 years it has been gratifying to note how the Victoria waterfront has developed into a real sightseers' mecca. After the years of effort by civic officials past and present it is a shock to learn that within a short period Wharf Street will be just another vehicle-choked artery serving mainly commercial interests.

It seems to me that during the past few years more people (both tourist and local) have taken advantage of the waterfront pedestrian facilities than ever before. The city has done an excellent job on sidewalks, rest areas, etc.

Indulging in some hindsight, it appears to my untrained eye that the Harbour Square development is the perfect location for a convention centre. With its location it is a mystery why this location wasn't considered years ago. — E. A. Wareham, 934 Agnes Street.

Manitoba eyes mining boom

WINNIPEG (CP) — The mining industry is expected to spend as much as 22 per cent more on exploration projects in Manitoba in 1980 than it did last year, says the provincial finance minister.

Don Craik predicts the industry will spend about $17.5 million on exploration this year, compared with $14.3 million in 1979 and $13.6 million in 1978.

The companies will look mainly for oil and metals such as zinc, nickel and copper, Craik said in an interview.

"From what we hear from all the major operators, the resources picture is looking pretty good this year," he said. "The general attitude of the mining community is excellent."

Besides exploration, the mining companies have large capital spending plans this year.

Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co., Ltd. is planning to spend $10 million for two new mines at Stall Lake and Spruce Point in central western Manitoba.

Inco Metals Co. will start work on a new ore processing plant where sulphuric acid will be a byproduct.

"It's a prototype plant to be built this year which will do research work for the entire international operations of Inco," Craik said.

"It could lead to some good spinoff effects for Manitoba in such areas as chemical products and fertilizers."

Harlequin slice goes to Torstar

TORONTO (CP) — Torstar Corp., which publishes The Toronto Star, announced it will increase its ownership of Harlequin Enterprises Ltd. by about 3.7 per cent to about 62 per cent of the outstanding shares, effective May 13.

Torstar said it is exercising options to buy 589,696 shares of Harlequin, a Toronto-based publisher of romantic fiction, at about $16.71 a share.

The option agreements with senior executives of Harlequin were entered into when Torstar acquired control of Harlequin in 1975.

Under the agreements, Torstar has the right to buy about 696,914 more Harlequin shares under options exercisable in 1981.

Pacific Copper in Aussie venture

EDMONTON (CP) — Pacific Copper Mines Ltd. of Edmonton has received government approval to develop a major thermal coal deposit in New South Wales, Australia.

An upsurge in demand for thermal coal is encouraging the company's Australian affiliate to develop a major new mine and to expand an existing Australian coal mine, Pacific Copper president C. D. Stewart said Thursday.

Pacific Copper Ltd. and its wholly-owned coal mining subsidiary, Barix Pty Ltd., have been given permission to develop the Mitchell's Flat coal deposit north of Sydney near Singleton, New South Wales.

Stewart, a director of the Australian company, said this will allow the Australian firm to complete marketing and financing agreements with major companies to develop the property.

The Edmonton-based company has a 24-per-cent interest in the Australian firm.

Metals margins cut back in N.Y.

NEW YORK (AP) — Margin requirements on gold and copper contracts traded on New York's Commodity Exchange Inc. have been lowered because of decreased volatility in the markets, the exchange said.

Margins are good faith money similar to a deposit that are required to trade futures contracts on exchanges.

The Comex said it decided to lower those margins because wide price swings that characterized the market earlier this year are no longer a factor and volatility in the markets is reduced.

The changes lowered speculative margins for gold from $10,000 to $8,000 a contract, while margins for hedgers in gold futures were lowered to $5,000 a contract from $6,000.

Speculative margins in copper were lowered from $3,500 to $2,500 a contract, while hedge margins were changed from $2,000 to $1,500 a contract.

The Comex margin committee left unchanged silver margins but raised straddle margins slightly based on the size of straddle positions.

Local lenders hold line on mortgages

By AL FORREST

Some local financial companies are beginning to dig in their heels in an effort to hold the line on mortgage rates.

"We've frozen our rate at 16 per cent for a one-year open mortgage," said Barry Collins, the Royal Bank's manager of lending services for Vancouver Island.

"I hope we can hold it there. We're going to give it our best shot."

At the same time the company is discouraging people from taking out long-term mortgages, both through advice and higher rates.

"We don't want to see people tied in to these high rates for a long term."

For example, the bank charges a record 17.75 per cent for five-year mortgages and 17.5 for three years.

"There may be a few people with special needs who require these long-term mortgages so we are making them available. But we assume most people will take the one-year term."

Other companies have the same philosophy and are offering their own special rates.

For example, starting April 30 the Bank of Montreal will give its customers a reduction of half a point below the prevailing one-year rate when their mortgages come up for renewal.

"We want to cushion the blow of these unusually high rates," bank spokesman Bob McGavin of Montreal told the Times.

"These high rates are unprecedented. We are advising our customers to take a one-year mortgage."

The current B of M rate for the one-year term is 16.5 per cent — and 16 per cent for its customer renewals.

Credit unions are also looking for innovative ways to help harried homeowners.

Westcoast Savings Credit Union is offering one-year mortgages at 16.5 per cent but the monthly payment can be lower than usual, spokesman Rodger Lutz said.

The company is making its Graduated Amortization Payment mortgages available on an open basis, which means they can be viewed as a one-year deal.

A GAP mortgage nominally has a five-year term. If the monthly payment is $500, that amount would be charged in the third year only.

The payment would be in the low $400s for the first year, a bit higher in the second, above $500 in the fourth and near $600 in the fifth.

But because the mortgage is open, the schedule could be cancelled at the end of one year, when, hopefully all interest rates will be lower.

The customer would have had the advantage of the low payment in the first 12 months.

All financial houses believe rates are nearing their peak and will be substantially lower in 1981.

Collins said the Royal believes the key will be the U.S. inflation rate.

Prayer clinic offers aid

Church of the Way prayer clinic is now open at 829 Admirals in Esquimalt.

Anyone wishing prayer, may call 388-5334 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Executive Pastor Bill Johns; Pastor Dr. Doug Roberts, Rev. Ted Follows and Rev. Fred Farren will be available for counselling by phoning for an appointment.

These combined ministries bring a wide background of experience and gifts of the Spirit.

Johns, founder of the inter-denominational Victoria Church of the Way, has been instrumental in starting churches at Duncan, Parksville and Campbell River, all within a three-year period.

Johns, born into the Roman Catholic faith, has ministered for more than 35 years as an evangelist, chaplain of a church college, an administrator of missions, prison chaplain, has built a boys' ranch and founded and served in many churches.

Follows is an ordained Baptist minister who now moves in the gifts of the Spirit, particularly in the ministry of physical and inner healing.

Farren, a former Roman Catholic priest, brings his experience of many years of pastoral work, serving in the charismatic renewal, chaplaincy in prisons, hospitals and mental institutions, including four years in a federal prison in Washington, D.C. and service in a mental institute for juveniles in New Brunswick.

Roberts graduated from medical school in 1964 and served as medical officer for five years in the Canadian Navy, then spent two years in East Africa. Roberts is author of the book, To Adam With Love.

He and his wife Donna are in demand as speakers, especially for seminars on family life.

Roberts remained in family practice in Victoria until 1970 and continues as medical officer in two centres of correction.

Recognizing Jesus as the Healer and operating in the gifts of the Spirit, these pastors of the Church of the Way will minister to all who come, whether for healing of the body or the emotions, for deliverance or counselling.

The concept of the Prayer Clinic is based on the work of Father Francis McNutt, a well known Catholic priest whose effective prayer ministry has become widely known.

In his book Healing, McNutt expresses this message, "A great revival of faith is sweeping the Christian world. It is known as the charismatic renewal. It refers to the extraordinary power given a Christian by the Holy Spirit."

He describes how the power to heal given by Christ to his Apostles is available to mankind today and can and should be an ordinary activity of Christian life.

Experience has shown that much further support should be forthcoming to help those in crisis situations; of depression, oppression, ill-health, drug and alcohol abuse or family problems.

Anyone who phones Church of the Way Prayer Clinic, 388-5334 can expect prayer and counselling on a continuing basis if necessary.

A workshop on the ministry of healing will be led by McNutt at the University of Victoria May 19-24, 1980. This workshop is designed for people who want to learn to help others, not for those people who seek healing for themselves.

Registration forms may be had by phoning the office of the Church of the Way 388-5334. Further information may be had by writing Doug Bridges, Lantzville, B.C.

Missionaries to El Salvador

Former Victoria residents Gary and Gabriele Lobinsoff have graduated in New York city from the Watchtower Bible School of Gilead, the missionary school of Jehovah's Witnesses.

The Lobinsoffs have been assigned to El Salvador, where there are 6,176 Witnesses among a population of 4.6 million.

Although all 45 students in the class had previously been teachers of the Bible full-time, Lobinsoff said, "The missionary course greatly sharpened our ability to teach God's word, as well as showed us how better to apply the Bible's practical principles in our own lives.

"Jehovah's Witnesses do not get involved with politics or social reform in any country. Our work as missionaries will be to benefit individuals and communities by teaching the Bible's high moral standards and its message of God's kingdom as mankind's only hope."

Witnesses are a society of Christians who believe that God's kingdom is an actual government now ruling in heaven which will soon take complete charge of the earth, bringing peace and perfect conditions to the human race.

Singing Saints concert

THE SINGING Saints youth choir of All Saints Anglican church in Vernon will give a concert at 7 p.m. April 19 at St. John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, and will sing a specially written folk mass at the 9:30 a.m. service April 20.

This 50-voice choir, whose members range in age from eight to 16 years, sings contemporary music in the folk idiom, accompanied by a variety of instruments. They have given concerts in Vancouver, Calgary and many parts of the B.C. Interior.

church chronicles

WILLIAM Van Crouch, insurance representative for New York Life, will be guest speaker at the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship dinner meeting at 6:30 p.m. April 14 in the new Crystal Garden.

Crouch, who will be in Victoria to address the Life Underwriters Sales Congress, will witness how Christ enabled him to pick up the pieces after a marriage breakup which resulted from his greed for money. He now counsels in marriage problems and family relationships and is a chaplain for an American football team.

In private life, he is a successful salesman in Chicago and is a member of the National Speakers' Association of the Million Dollar Round Table.

GARDEN CITY United Church will host Mohamed Bidair and Karim El Domiaty, students from Egypt at Pearson College, at 10 a.m. Sunday. The pair will speak about their homeland during an International Sunday service.

Rev. Ronald Johnstone said all are welcome at the service in the church at 4054 Carey.

CHURCHES of all denominations have been asked to observe Sunday as Nature Sunday as part of National Wild Life Week, April 7-13, taking as their theme God in Nature or God's Great Outdoors, as part of a continuing education program begun years ago to honor the memory of renowned naturalist Jack Miner.

THE CANADIAN flag will be among 190 national flags flying at Dallas, Texas, April 17 to 26 when an expected 25,000 people from many countries attend the 53rd world session of the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The international assembly meets every five years to conduct the official business of the church and this will mark the first time that the general conference has met in the southern U.S.

Church organizers say their membership has grown by 750,000 to 3,280,000 adherents since the last world conference in Vienna, Austria, in 1975.

CANADIAN Ecumenical Action Victoria invites singles 30 to 50 years of age to a meeting in Centennial United church's lounge (612 David Street entrance) Saturday, April 19 at 8 p.m. for a slide show on Greece followed by a panel discussion on Travelling Alone—Fun or Folly? Come alone or bring a friend. Admission free.

Handel's Solomon oratorio slated

Handel's Solomon, an oratorio of pageant and splendor, will be presented by the choir and soloists of First United Church and Cordova Bay United Church on Saturday, April 19 at 8 p.m.

Tickets, $2.50, can be obtained from chorus members, or by phoning 388-5188, or at the door of First United, Quadra at Balmoral, on concert night.

Lovers of Handel, even the most knowledgeable and dedicated ones, hardly realize how different his oratorios can be, say concert organizers.

Messiah and Israel in Egypt, the two based directly on the Bible, are the nearest in spirit to liturgical performance, although not meant for this purpose. Semele is really an English opera taken from a classical myth. Saul and Samson, dramatic masterpieces modelled directly on Old Testament stories, have often been staged. L'Allegro is a delicate English pastorale drawn from nature and the poet Milton.

Solomon, on the other hand, is pageant and splendor with the dramatic action largely confined to the second act. Yet this does not lessen its appeal, for Handel managed to combine elements of infinite color and variety in his musical presentation to create a powerful and lasting effect.

Solomon is an oratorio of three acts; the first two will be sung at the April 19 concert.

Mormons plan temples

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (AP) — The Mormon Church, in an effort to "bring temples to the people," has announced plans to build seven new temples in the United States and six more abroad.

The announcement came as the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, based in Salt Lake City, prepared to celebrate its 150th anniversary.

The new temples are part of a worldwide effort to "preach the gospel to every creature," said church President Spencer Kimball.

None will compare in size or grandeur to present temples, and some of the new ones will be as small as one-sixteenth the size of the new Salt Lake Valley temple, now under construction.

The church, with 4.5 million members, now has 17 temples and four others under construction.

The new temples—used only by faithful Mormons for sacred ordinances—are to be constructed in Atlanta, Ga.; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Sydney, Australia; Santiago, Chile; Papeete, Tahiti; Nuku'alofa, Tonga; and Apia, Western Somoa.

No cost was given for the new buildings.

Perspectives

By REV. J.A. DAVIDSON

Many years ago, not long after I had been ordained to the ministry, I was amused one day to hear myself referred to as a "miscellaneous body." I was at that time a chaplain in the Canadian Army (this was long before the unification of the forces), and I was temporarily at Camp Valcartier, near Quebec City, in a group en route to Germany to serve with Canada's NATO brigade.

As a chaplain I was put in a section of the draft consisting of members of the smaller and more specialized departments of the army. I overheard a sergeant refer to me, as a member of that special section, as a "miscellaneous body"—actually, a "miscellaneous body to be processed." (In my imagination I could see the shipping room of a meat-packing plant, full of tins labelled "Canned Clergy" and "Potted Padre".)

"A miscellaneous body to be processed." The expression was really quite innocent, and I was amused to hear it applied to me. On the other hand, it is an expression with alarming undertones. It is suggestive of careless and casual indifference toward the need and suffering of others.

This indifference is one of the great corrupting sins of our time, refusing to see each person with his or her sacred individuality and claim for respect, and seeing only miscellaneous bodies as mere blobs in an undifferentiated sea of humanity.

A character in one of Bernard Shaw's plays said this: "The worst sin toward our fellow creatures is not to hate them but to be indifferent to them." He then described indifference as "the essence of inhumanity."

Indifference, then, can be a greater sin than hatred: hatred at least sees a person whereas indifference sees only a "miscellaneous body." Perhaps that was what Albert Schweitzer had in mind when a few years before his death he said to a reporter that the greatest problem of our time is "to safeguard the integrity of the individual in the modern state."

We tend to limit our concern for persons as persons to those in our own little circles—and not even they are always exempt from our indifference. From television and radio and the newspapers we learn about suffering and distress at home and in all parts of the world, but all this information engenders in us what has been called "compassion fatigue."

And that causes us to cultivate what the Ernest F. Tittle, an American church leader, called "convenient ignorance" and delineated in this way, "If I do not know too much about the misery of others, I may not feel called upon to do anything about it."

We may talk a good compassion—but how compassionate are we with our time and energy, how compassionate with our purses? We sometimes try to salve our uneasy consciences by asking in virtuous indignation, "Why doesn't somebody do something about it?"

A detached academic or study-group sort of interest in the plight of others can readily become a subtle form of indifference that is content with pious chatter but doesn't do much rolling-up of the sleeves to do practical things.

Of course, there is much genuine compassion being displayed in our society, much creative caring about the caring for the needs and sufferings of persons. Those of us who take the way of biblical faith have an obligation to be more compassionate ourselves and to support the agencies of wider compassion. In God's economy there are no miscellaneous bodies.

(Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Divorce: Hope for RCs?

Has the Catholic Church changed its teaching about marriage? What are the effects of divorce on catholics? How does annulment differ from divorce? Is re-marriage possible in the Catholic Church? Do divorced people have a place in the Church?

These are just some of the areas that will be explored in a three-evening seminar presented by the Pastoral Office of Marriage of the Diocese of Victoria.

Marriage break-up has reached alarming proportions in North America, cutting across and affecting all Christian denominations, said Denise Doyle, director of the Pastoral Office of Marriage.

In spite of the fact the traditional Roman Catholic position is that marriage is a sacrament, and that the vows of marriage bind for life, its members also share the burden of the rising divorce rate in Canada, she said.

In an effort to face up to the new circumstances and to try to find possible solutions, the pastoral Office of Marriage of the R.C. Diocese of Victoria is presenting the program: Divorce and the Church.

"We want to look at present church law, the conditions for annulment, possible pastoral solutions, and also what the divorced have to contribute to church life," Ms. Doyle said.

Family focus at retreat

The family will be the focus of attention at a special retreat given in Victoria by Dr. Thomas Francoeur of Montreal.

This retreat will be part of a "big week event" sponsored by the Office of Religious Education of the Diocese of Victoria, toward the end of April. Fancoeur will visit Nanaimo as well as Victoria giving conferences, mini-retreats and days of renewal, all on the family theme.

Francoeur is a clinical psychologist and theologian from the department of Catholic studies at McGill University in Montreal. As a parent and religious educator, Francoeur has lectured on effective parenting and the nurturing of faith in children. He is known in Canada and the U.S. for his workshops and retreats.

The retreat in Victoria will have as its theme: Christ Lives in the Family. It will begin Friday, April 18 at 7:30 p.m. and run all day Saturday, April 19. It will be held at the Royal Oak Inn, 4680 Elk Drive (658-5231) and accommodation can be arranged directly with the inn.

The Francoeur retreat is open to parents, single parens and other interested adults. The registration fee is $10 a person, $15, for a couple. More information at the Office of Religious Education, 4053 Gordon Head Road, Victoria, 721-5221.

Wilderness slide show tonight

The youth department of the Seventh-day Adventist Church has invited former pastor Charles Cooper to show his latest film on Saturday at 983 Pandora at 8 p.m.

Since retirement Cooper and his wife have been travelling across Canada and the U.S., showing his exceptional color-slide programs by request. The photography was largely taken in the spectacular areas of this province.

Cooper is author of several books on nature. His most recently released is called The Wilderness Beyond.

The Coopers navigated the full length of the Mackenzie River from Hay to Inuvik, N.W.T., and the Yukon River.

In all the foofaraw about a tunnel between Vancouver Island and the mainland, we've somehow lost sight of the most convincing argument in favor — it would make one hell of a disaster movie.

I can see the blurbs now . . .

You trembled with Earthquake. You sweated through The Towering Inferno. Now brace yourselves for an experience beyond total idiocy. A horror story so hair-raising, even the politicians are scared.

THE TUNNEL

Starring Bill Bennett, Sam Bawlf, Pat McGeer and an unwilling cast of thousands. Special effects by the B.C. Ferry Corporation.

Warning: Occasional swearing and coarse language. Frequent brutal, frightening and suggestive debates. (B.C. Director).

The film itself would be a veritable smorgasbord of possible disasters — earthquake, natural gas explosion, leaky roof, escape of a flea circus, pick you own cataclysm.

My favorite bit comes at the end.

It's a sunny morning at the start of a long weekend. The tunnel is filled with cars, bumper to bumper, going nowhere.

A camper van carrying a punk rock band has broken down near one exit. At the other end, a semi trailer loaded with strawberry jam has jacknifed, blocking the tunnel with 300,000 gallons of red, sticky goo and one or two strawberries.

At this point a giant geoduck (pronounced gooeyduck) clam begins to break through the tunnel roof.

(We originally thought of using a giant octopus but the local variety is neither large enough nor ferocious enough. On the other hand, no one knows how big these geoducks get and they are very ugly customers indeed.

As water cascades onto the stalled cars and cursing drivers, the giant clam inserts its 300-foot-long siphon into the tunnel and starts to inhale the travelling public.

Water sloshes around the trapped vehicles. The ugly snout probes further and further down the tunnel. Hysteria rages. Some drivers publicly renounce their membership in the Social Credit Party. Others break out their fishing gear.

A few of the cooler heads get together with a bottle of vodka and tomato and consider making the world's largest Bloody Caesar.

In Victoria, debate rages on whether Miracle the killer whale should be sent in to tackle the Killer Clam. At an emergency cabinet meeting the government passes an order rescinding clams retroactively.

Just when things are at their darkest and clammiest, a B.C. Ferry drops anchor at the disaster scene. Two divers wearing chef's hats plunge into the murky depths. In no time at all they have chopped the marine monster into tiny, bite-size chunks. For the next 18 months, ferry cafeterias feature a special on clam chowder.

One half of the giant clamshell is used to repair the break in the tunnel. The other half is quickly pressed into service as a replacement for the Princess Marguerite.

Miracle, denied the chance to be a hero, announces she will run as an NDP candidate in Oak Bay.

ICBC announces it would really love to honor the hundreds of damage claims but can't because clams are an act of God, tunnels are an act of politics and clearly the corporation is responsible for neither.

Life returns to normal. As the credits roll on the big screen, we fade out on an underwater shot of some suspicious-looking kelp putting down roots near the tunnel.

Whaddaya think, Marlon? Is that a winner or is that a winner?

I have discovered the federal government owes the province of B.C. a million dollars, give or take a few bucks.

I came across this shocking information while leafing through the 1871 Terms of Union legislation which joined B.C. to the Dominion of Canada. (I really must catch up on my filing.)

Section II of that act says the Dominion government agreed to pay to B.C., from the date of the Union, the sum of $100,000 per annum, to sweeten he deal.

I am reliably informed that B.C. never saw a red cent of that promised money.

Well! That means the money has theoretically been piling up and piling up for he past 109 years. Figuring the interest at a reasonable ten per cent compounded annually, it would come to a very large figure indeed. An astonishing figure. I only wish I knew what it was. If you work it out, let me know, I always flunked math.

It's this kind of tranquility that members of greenbelt committee want preserved.

Highlands' future is now

By BRENDA DALGLISH

A group of residents of the Highlands is convinced that the rugged hill country where they live is a unique and special recreation resource of value to the whole region.

So convinced that a resident's committee called the Highlands Greenbelt Committee has produced a glossy booklet in a bid to arouse public interest in its future.

The committee's ultimate aim is simple: the preservation of a large part of the Highlands for recreational use.

The booklet points out that cities all over the world have carried out programs to provide open space for the growing recreational needs of their citizens.

With the price of gasoline increasing at a fast rate, the need for recreation areas close to urban centres is becoming a pressing problem.

Few other North American cities have the opportunity to even consider such potential recreation area, the booklet claims.

Future plans for the 15,000-acre Highlands located 20 minutes from downtown Victoria, have been tossed back and forth for several years.

The provincial government, the Capital Regional district and area residents have all tried to reach some agreement about how the largely undeveloped area should be used.

Now, with results of months of secondary planning by the CRD soon to be finalized, the greenbelt group has produced the brochure to inform the public of the resources in the Highlands.

Committee chairman Kerry Joy says now is the time for careful planning.

But Joy is careful to emphasize the group isn't making demands or even trying to tell politicans what to do.

"We've followed each step of the planning process and now that local residents have expressed their opinions over several years, we feel that it's important for the public to recognize the tremendous potential of the Highlands."

Joy's remarks were an implied criticism of another group of residents of the Highlands who are strongly opposed to talk of recreation.

That group argues that they own the land and should be allowed freedom to develop it largely as they choose.

This group has outlined its position in strident terms and have even on one occasion stormed the offices of CRD planners.

They object to anyone who doesn't own property there being allowed to offer input into discussion of the issue.

The group has succeeded to a certain extent in drawing the CRD away from its original intention — outlined in the regional and western community settlement plans — that a large portion of the Highlands be designated park land and open space.

The preservation proponents say the Highlands has eight miles of Victoria's last undeveloped salt water beach.

It has rugged hiking areas and well-stocked lakes and streams.

Bald and golden eagles, turkey vultures, hawks, owls and rare mountain quails can be found there.

"What the committee would like to see happen is for particularly attractive and valuable recreation areas to be identified and then connected by hiking and bridle trails," says Joy.

This could be done without great government expenditure, the brochure explains, by using provincial legislation that permits dedication of trail land in the same way highways are dedicated.

When a property owner requests subdivision of his property, a condition of approval would be that a portion of his property be dedicated for trail use.

Completing the trail system would take some time, Joy admits, but if plans aren't made now it will never be a possibility again.

He wants the CRD to do a careful analysis of the Highlands to identify the best recreation areas, decide on a future trail system and keep the minimum lot size large enough in bordering areas that the character of the land isn't destroyed.

"There's money available from private foundations and funds for the preservation of parkland if the community indicates a desire to do so," he claims.

The committee doesn't object to a long-standing CRD plan to eventually provide high density housing in a 3,000-acre area in the southern Highlands which is already designated as urban reserve.

Sunday shop issue looks like headache for everyone

By AL FORREST

The four core municipalities are not amused that the provincial government has dumped the Sunday shopping hassle back in their laps.

But now that it's there, they are struggling towards a united solution — while hoping the issue will just quietly go away.

Under legislation introduced this week, each municipality may hold a non-binding referendum on the question and pass its own laws.

Locally, this was the reaction:

Esquimalt Mayor Ken Hill: "The provincial government should have decided this question and not shifted the burden to the municipalities. We should act together, but how can we? If two (municipalities) pass a referendum and two defeat it, we will have a real mess."

Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier: "We should have identical wording on our referendums. All four municipalities should work together on this. Saanich probably would abide by the result of its referendum."

Victoria acting mayor Ron McKenzie (Mayor Tindall is out of town): "I'm content with the present shopping hours but if there is to be a change, all four municipalities should act together."

Oak Bay Mayor Doug Watts: "I'm content with the present situation, just corner stores open on Sunday. If the other municipalities have open shopping, we could live with that. I don't think we will be changing."

Hill was angry that the issue had been dumped on his municipality by the provincial government.

"This is a poor approach. The provincial government should have said yes or no. Everyone should fly in the same plane."

He said it was easy to urge all four municipalities to act in unison but there is no way to achieve this.

For example, three municipalities could give a resounding 'no', while the fourth gave a resounding 'yes'.

The fourth municipality could not afford to follow the lead of the other three when its citizens were so strongly of the opposite view.

MAYOR KEN HILL
. . . he's unhappy

"We may just let the matter sit and see what happens. We will not hold a referendum unless we have to."

Hill said he is against wide open Sunday shopping because it creates a hardship for people who had to work strange shifts.

Couvelier said the first step in reaching a decision would be for the inter-municipal committee to see if it could come up with a united approach.

At the very least, there should be identical referendums so all municipalities ask the same question.

On a personal basis, he said, he can see good arguments on both sides of the issue.

"Some small stores might be forced out of business if the big ones are open on Sunday. On the other hand, the majority of shoppers want stores open on Sunday.

"With odd shifts and changing lifestyles, there is an increasing demand for Sunday shopping.

"I have never had a strong personal view on the question.

"I know that, no matter which way we go, the decision will be fiercely contested by the other side.

"It is a highly emotional issue and I'm glad it is to go to a referendum for a decision."

It would be up to council as a whole to decide whether to accept the verdict of the voters as binding.

Historically, Couvelier said, council has tended to follow the expressed wishes of voters in a referendum and probably should do so on this question.

He said he would have preferred the question to be dealt with on a regional basis. McKenzie said he personally is happy with present shopping hours.

But if the merchants press the issue, Victoria might have to hold a referendum.

It should have been resolved on a regional basis, he said, but this is not possible because of the wording of the provincial legislation.

"We could end up with one drug store open and another one closed across the street in another municipality. It could be a real dog's breakfast."

Watts said Oak Bay likely will take an informal poll in May when it sends out a questionnaire on its community plan.

"We may include a question about Sunday shopping. If there is any interest, we may hold a formal referendum later. But Sunday shopping has not been an issue in Oak Bay.

No party for police

Greater Victoria police were kept busy overnight quelling a number of noisy parties in the area.

Numerous cases of beers were seized but only one person was taken into custody for being drunk in a public place.

Oak Bay had the most problems.

Police were inundated with calls from residents reporting disturbances on beaches from Gonzales to Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Saanich broke up a rowdy gathering in Mount Douglas Park and Colwood RCMP dispersed youths whooping it up at the lagoon.

Central Saanich police, which has bolstered its night patrols on weekends, reported no incidents.

Victoria police were called out on only one beach party but had their hands full breaking up a rowdy party at a house at 1370 Slater.

Five officers managed eventually to clear the house but only after they had taken 12 of the partiers into custody for breach of peace.

The 12, ranging in age from 16 to 20 and including two girls, were released early this morning.

Teacher files draw protest

Nanaimo school trustee Pat Barron has demanded Education Minister Brian Smith ban files which hold confidential information on every school teacher in the province.

Barron said trustees visited ministry offices, including one where confidential files are kept, on March 28.

According to Barron the following discussion took place between trustees and their ministry official guide:

"Do these files contain all information on a B.C. school teacher, including personal information?"

"Yes. As fas as is possible to obtain, all information including personal is in that teacher's file."

"Supposing I were a B.C. teacher and someone wrote in saying I was a homosexual. Would that letter then go into my file?"

"Yes. That letter would go into your file."

"If some organization wrote in saying I didn't pay my debts. Would that also go into my file?"

"Yes. Because we would be alerted to possible problems."

"But supposing these various charges were not true?"

"We have no control over that."

"If I as a teacher came in here and asked to see my file could I see it?"

"Yes."

"All of the information in my file?"

"Not necessarily."

"Why not?"

"Because we might have to protect the confidentiality of the sources and would make the necessary extractions to do so".

World Series anyone? L.A. is nice in the fall

The baseball season started this week and thus today's unadvertised special: where to make your World Series plans this fall.

Last year wasn't bad — three divisional winners out of four. Sorry about that, and the World Series win by Pittsburgh Pirates. That was a bit of a shocker too as Baltimore Orioles were supposed to handle that chore.

But fear not, Walker's Handy Handicap is back and the clubs have been told to behave.

Los Angeles looks like a likely place to start those plans because the Angels and Dodgers should be right there in the fight for divisional honors in each league. Matter of fact a cross-town series looks like a great parlay. You can bet on it.

Oh, I know, the Angels haven't got Nolan Ryan. He and his million-dollar arm are off to Houston. But they have Bruce Kison from Pittsburgh. His arm froze in last year's Series opener but his record is good and the Angels feel the arm will respond in West Coast weather. Key is Frank Tanana. If the big lefthander returns to form, it may be game over because the Angels should be stronger afield with the addition of Al Cowens, the return of Joe Rudi and with free agent Fred Patek at shortstop.

So that decides the American League West with Texas and Minnesota to run two-three in whatever order. The Twins are always close, have few name players but appear to be young team on the way up with an excellent manager in Gene Mauch.

The Rangers have a wealth of talent including Sparky Lyle, Jeff Burroughs, Gaylord Perry, Ferguson Jenkins, Jim Kern and, if form holds, may not be denied and would be no surprise.

Kansas City, Chicago, Seattle and Oakland will follow on.

Topside in the Eastern Division, where last year's top four teams all posted a better mark than the Angels, will be Baltimore Orioles in a dogfight. First, though, manager Earl Weaver must keep pitcher Jim Palmer healthy and happy. He's the bellweather of a fine staff that includes Tippy Martinez, Sammy Stewart and Tim Stoddard, an able replacement for Don Stanhouse as Weaver's No. 1 reliefer.

The upstart could be Milwaukee. And maybe it wouldn't be an upset. The Brewers have it all with power to spare in the big bats of Gorman Thomas (45 home runs, 123 runs batted in), Cecil Cooper (24 and 106), Sixto Lezcano (28 and 101) and Ben Ogilvie (29 and 81). And if Larry Hisle gets well — he had a bad shoulder last year — look out. But the condition of manager George Bamberger is the mute question. Bamberger recently underwent heart surgery and is not expected back until June, or maybe later. How important is a manager? The Brewers could find out early.

The Yankees have a new manager in Dick Howser and a healthy Rick Gossage in the bullpen. Both are pluses. Former manager Billy Martin is in Oakland and Gossage was out most of last year with a broken thumb suffered in a brawl with Cliff Johnson. The Yanks also have power in newcomers Bob Watson and Ruppert Jones and extra relief depth in pitcher Rudy May. They will need it.

Boston, Detroit, Cleveland and Toronto will follow.

In the National West, the Dodgers should be money in the bank. If they weren't the best team at the end of '79, who was? They closed down the stretch at a .623 clip after a bad start. Five players hit 20 or more home runs. Steve Garvey was fourth in batting and hit 28 homers, as did Ron Cey and Davey Lopes; and Rick Sutcliffe won 17 games as a rookie. If the pitching — a trouble spot with Terry Foster, Doug Rau, Andy Messersmith and Bobby Welch all being sidelined for long periods in '79 — responds, hello Series.

Tab Houston, which just missed last year, for second in the West and San Francisco Giants for third. The Astros made two moves in the off-season that could pay off. They won the auction for Nolan Ryan and are paying $1 million a year for the privilege and they picked up Joe Morgan who started with Houston 17 years ago. If Ryan is right, manager Bill Virdon will find himself with a fair staff of starters: Ryan, J.R. Richard, who struck out 313 batters last year, Joe Niekro, the knuckleballer and 21-game winner, and Ken Forsch. That could be enough.

The Giants won the Grapefruit League and just can't be as bad as last year. Still, pitching is the problem with Vida Blue, Ed Halicki, Ed Whitson and John Montefusco having to do what they were supposed to do, and didn't, last year, for the team to survive.

Cincinnati, San Diego and Atlanta will fill out the schedule.

Will the Expos make it in the National East? Sure. But only if newcomer Ron LeFlore takes to the town and has a good season. After all, the Expos had the third best record (.594) in baseball last year and were only two lengths back of the Pirates at the wire. They have the pitching and the best earned-run average in the league in '79. Steve Rogers, Ross Grimsley and rookie star Dave Palmer are the anchor men. And they have power in Larry Parrish (30 home runs), LeFlore, Warren Cromartie and catcher Gary Carter.

Don't count out Pittsburgh too hastily, however. The 'family' and world champions still have those great bats, second in the league in hitting (.272), first in runs scored (775), second in home runs (148), second in stolen bases (180). If they have a so-so starting pitching staff, they have a great relief corps headed by Kent Tekulve who won 10 and saved 31 last year. But they are older. Willie Stargell turned 39 a few weeks ago.

Philadelphia, beset by injuries in '79, will bounce back to finish third and maybe get up for second while St. Louis, Chicago and New York Mets will bring up the rear.

Y'r welcome.

Tiger strikes, Bowman boils

Times News Services

One-half the lineup for next week's National Hockey League quarter-final playoffs was filled Friday when Philadelphia Flyers, Minnesota North Stars, Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks eliminated Stanley Cup pretenders.

Eight other teams continue best-of-five series to determine who gets four remaining berths and the liveliest action should be in Vancouver tonight.

Philadelphia won 3-2 on a goal by Ken Linseman at 3:58 of a second overtime period in Edmonton, Minnesota won 4-3 on a goal by Al MacAdam after 32 seconds of overtime in Toronto and Montreal won 4-3 on a goal by Yvon Lambert after 29 seconds of overtime in Hartford, Conn.

Chicago did not require extra time to send St. Louis Blues packing 4-1. Atlanta Flames defeated New York Rangers 4-2 and New York Islanders edged Los Angeles Kings 4-3, also in overtime.

In Vancouver, the Canucks shaded Buffalo 5-4 as Tiger Williams struck and got under the skin of Scotty Bowman.

Williams and Bowman were involved in a controversial first-period incident. Bowman was hit on the side of the head by a stick in a melee near the players box and spent the rest of the period in the dressing room with a mild concussion. While he was away, the Canucks scored four goals and managed to hang on and send the best-of-five opening-round Stanley Cup series to a fourth game — or perhaps a Williams-Bowman rematch — tonight. Sabres lead the series 2-1.

"I don't know what happened," an angry Bowman said after the game. "I do know I got hit over the head with a stick — and it was deliberate."

Associate coach Roger Neilson of the Sabres said it was "a criminal act, it was deliberate and it could have killed him."

Williams claimed he doesn't know what happened when he and a Buffalo player collided along the boards.

"I didn't know he got hit," Williams said, "All I remember was our players yelling something about Dudley."

Rick Dudley of the Sabres grabbed Williams near the Vancouver blue line and referee Bryan Lewis tossed Dudley out of the game with a fighting major and game misconduct. Williams wasn't penalized for the incident.

Coach Harry Neale of the Canucks said Bowman was "constantly yapping at our players all game" and sometimes coaches "lean too close to the play."

Canucks got goals from Bob Manno, Gary Lupul, Darcy Rota and Kevin McCarthy in the first period, plus a key insurance marker from Per-Olov Brasar in the third.

Bowman returned to the Buffalo bench in the second and the Sabres nearly came back to tie the game. Danny Gare scored in the first period, Derek Smith in the second and late goals by Tony McKegney and Rick Martin made it close.

Bowman engaged in separate yelling matches after the game with general manager Jake Milford of the Canucks and club president Frank Griffiths.

● In Edmonton, Linseman's low shot eluded Edmonton goaltender Ron Low to give the Flyers their win.

● In Toronto, there were two shots taken in overtime — he Leafs' Terry Martin had a shot kicked out by Minnesota's Gilles Meloche and the North Stars won the game on Al MacAdam's goal on the ensuing Minnesota thrust.

● In Hartford, the Montreal overtime win might have been costly for the Canadiens. Guy Lafleur left early in the second period with a knee injury and did not return.

● In Los Angeles, the Islanders used a rookie pro and an U.S. Olympic hero to get their win. Defenceman Ken Morrow scored his first NHL goal

● In St. Louis, Doug Lecuyer scored two goals and Tom Lysiak set up goals by Darryl Sutter and Bob Murray to highlight Chicago's sweep.

● In Atlanta, Eric Vail scored a pair of second-period goals to trigger the Flames' win.

Cats offered time to think

Victoria Cougar coach Jack Shupe, still smarting over the publicity that struck his Western Hockey League club earlier this week, has taken steps designed to keep his players on their toes while being interviewed.

With the Cougars scheduled to open the best-of-seven Western Division final against Seattle Breakers at Memorial Arena tonight (8:30), Shupe has declared the Victoria dressing room "off limits" to the media "as of today."

It does not mean the players will be unavailable.

"Media members will not be allowed access to the dressing room after a game," said Shupe. "Anyone wishing to talk to players or coaches can do so in the interview room across the hall (where Shupe regularly conducts his post-game interviews).

"There will be full co-operation."

Shupe feels "professional reporters" have a big edge in talking to "18-year-olds" and the walk out of the dressing room across a hall way may help players collect their thoughts.

The move is another after-effect of a Portland television reporter's interview with centre Barry Pederson last Tuesday. Pederson, while denying he was serious, gave an affirmative answer to the reporter's question on whether Cougars may "throw" a Thursday game in Seattle in order to avoid meeting Portland Winter Hawks in the final.

Pederson was suspended from the Thursday game, which Seattle won 6-5. Portland manager Brian Shaw said Friday he "commends" Cougars for their performance but said "I have to ask why it was necessary to suspend Pederson."

Regina Pats avoided cause for another incident that might have embarassed WHL officials when they defeated Medicine Hat Tigers 3-1 in the Southern Alberta centre Friday. Victory clinched Regina's berth in the Eastern Division final. The Tigers, who finish the round-robin semi-final by meeting Brandon Wheat Kings, can clinch their berth tonight.

A Tiger victory Friday would have created the same situation that confronted the Cougars Thursday. Since it is obvious Medicine Hat would have preferred to meet Brandon rather than the division-winning Pats in the final, the Tigers would have accomplished that by losing to the Wheat Kings tonight — provided they had beaten Regina on Friday.

But Regina, getting a pair of goals from Bill Ansell and one from Doug Wickenheiser, avoided the possibility. Rod Buskas scored Tigers' goal before a home crowd of 4,685.

Should Brandon win tonight, all three semi-finalists would wind up with a 2-2 won-lost record. Regina would advance, however, because of its first-place finish while the Tigers and the Wheat Kings would meet in a sudden-death playoff at Medicine Hat.

KRAHN NEW BOMBER

WINNIPEG (CP) — Quarterback Jim Krahn of the University of Arizona has signed a multi-year contract with Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Furey, Buchanan hit '600' series to qualify

Hazel Furey and Ken Buchanan both topped the "600" plateau at Mayfair Lanes to win the tenpin awards during the 25th week of competition in the 17th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Hazel topped the women's division with a 206-224-177 — 607 series in the Breakfast Club League and Ken nailed down men's laurels with a 204-193-231 — 628 in the Monday Mixed League.

Both are now qualified to compete in the season-end Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs scheduled for 1 p.m. April 27 at Mayfair.

Fivepin winners in the 26-week contest compete in rolloffs at the same time May 4 at Town and Country Lanes.

Lindsay coach in Detroit shift

Times News Services

Ted Lindsay, general manager of Detroit Red Wings for three years, has been named coach of the National Hockey League club in a management shakeup.

Marcel Pronovost, hired as an assistant coach in March, will return to that job next season, team president and owner Bruce Norris said. Pronovost finished the season as interim coach after Bobby Kromm was fired March 21.

Lindsay also will be director of player personnel while vice-president Louis Risi Jr., named executive vice-president, will direct the team's business operations.

Meanwhile in Toronto, Scott Young, Globe and Mail sports columnist, resigned to protest what he called cowardly, poison-pen journalism after a front-page story about the Maple Leafs appeared in the Globe.

Young, a long-time critic of unattributed quotations, said in his letter to Editor-in-Chief R. J. (Dick) Doyle he was resigning in protest "against tolerance of the kind of cowardly, poison-pen journalism that the newspaper printed on its front page this morning under the byline of Don Ramsay."

"I am not referring to his quoting Darryl Sittler (Leaf forward) about (team owner) Harold Ballard, but the personal and professional attacks made by players whom Ramsay did not name, if indeed any players did make the remarks quoted."

The article quoted Sittler as saying Ballard's comments on the team losing two playoff games in a row to Minnesota North Stars were "demeaning and do nothing but hurt the team." Ballard had said the team was playing as if the players wanted to get out their golf clubs.

One unidentified player is quoted as saying the team has "no system for getting the puck out of our own zone" while another says the club is being "out-coached" by other teams.

Ramsay said in an interview every quote in story came from a player.

"I had a couple of beers with four or five of the players and they made enough statements to fill 20 columns," Ramsay said.

Ballesteros forces pros to play catch

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Australian David Graham isn't counting on any help from second-round leader Seve Ballesteros in the 44th Masters golf tournament. "I think he'll have to be caught," Graham said. "I don't think he'll back up at all."

Ballesteros, the handsome young Spaniard who captured the British Open last year, sprayed several drives all around the 7,040-yard Augusta National Golf Club course Friday. Still, he salvaged a three-under-par 69 that gave him a 135 total and a four-shot lead at the halfway mark of the season's first major golf event.

"I think I can shoot two good rounds and get to six or seven under," Jack Nicklaus said, but added the outcome of the tournament "all depends on what Ballesteros does."

Tom Watson agreed.

"Seve's not going to make too many errors on the course," Watson said. "I'd have to shoot a pair of 67s to even come close."

Nicklaus, at age 40 trying to regain the touch that made him the game's greatest player and a five-time Masters champion, and Watson, golf's player-of-the-year the last three seasons, had a long way to go. Watson rallied with a 69 for 142, seven shots off the lead, and Nicklaus had a 71-145.

Ballesteros, who celebrated his 23rd birthday Wednesday, was nine-under-par and threatening to run away from the elite international field of 91 that was chopped to 52 players for the final two rounds. Scores of 146 or better survived the cut.

Graham, the 1979 PGA champion, and Texan Jeff Mitchell shared the first-round lead with Ballesteros at six-under 66, but both fell off the pace Friday on a perfect day for golf.

Graham, stung by a double-bogey five at the par-3 12th, settled for a 73 for 139.

Long bird helps Amy share lead

Times News Services

Defending champion Amy Alcott sank a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole Friday to shoot a four-under-par 68 and tie Lynn Adams for the opening-round lead in a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Raleigh, N.C.

Adams, a relatively-unknown Texan, had taken the lead with a birdie at 17.

Meanwhile, in Hattiesburg, Miss., the second round of the men's Magnolia Classic was postponed Friday because of rain. Play was stopped twice, once for nearly 2½ hours, by thunder showers before officials decided to call off the day's play.

Matt likes this start better

By The Associated Press

Matt Keough is off to an auspicious start for Oakland A's. Actually, anything would be better than last year.

Keough, who lost his first 14 American League baseball games last season en route to a miserable 2-17 won-lost record, got off on the right foot Friday night with a four-hit, 1-0 beauty over Minnesota Twins.

"I haven't lost in 1980," quipped Keough, "and I see no reason to start."

Memories of last year's personal collapse, though, continue to haunt the Oakland right-hander a bit.

"In my first start last year, against Minnesota, I pitched eight-plus innings, gave up one run and got no decision," said Keough. "I did give up 11 hits, though. Thank goodness it was different this time."

The victory not only tasted good to Keough, but also to Billy Martin, who won his first game as the Oakland manager.

"I think the fans will be happy when they come out here, when they see how we're playing," said Martin. "These guys have forgotten about last year."

The A's finished last in the American League West Division last year.

In other American League games, California Angeles routed Cleveland Indians 10-2; Texas Rangers outscored New York Yankees 11-7; Kansas City Royals blanked Detroit Tigers 4-0; Chicago White Sox turned back Baltimore Orioles 8-4 and Toronto Blue Jays whipped Seattle Mariners 11-7 in 11 innings.

Bucks take series lead

Times News Services

Bob Lanier's scoring and Harvey Catchings' shot-blocking have helped Milwaukee Bucks take the upper hand in their playoff series with Seattle SuperSonics, but Milwaukee coach Don Nelson isn't ready to count out the defending National Basketball Association champions.

"We're too even," Nelson said. "There is no control in this series until it's over and somebody wins or loses."

The clubs split a pair of overtime games in Seattle before the best-of-seven series moved to Milwaukee Friday night, where the Bucks took a 2-1 lead by edging the SuperSonics 95-91.

Lanier led Milwaukee with 24 points. Catchings, the Bucks' backup centre, came up with two key blocked shots in the second half.

"Harvey saved us a sure four points, and it was a five-point game at that point," said Nelson. "Anybody who goes to the basket when he's in there is going to have to deal with Harvey sooner or later, and he's one of the best shot blockers in the league."

In other NBA playoff action, Boston Celtics whipped Houston Rockets 95-75 to take a 2-0 lead in their series, and Los Angeles Lakers edged Phoenix Suns 108-105 to move to a 3-0 lead.

Seattle coach Lenny Wilkens said the Bucks' switching defences, led by Catchings and guard Quinn Buckner, hurt his team.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 37 points for the Lakers.

Four games are scheduled Sunday: Boston at Houston, Seattle at Milwaukee, Los Angeles at Phoenix and Philadelphia '76ers at Atlanta.

Merchants ready to go

A drive for financial support from the business community has met with excellent success and Victoria's newest team, the Victoria Merchants of the Pacific Coast Junior "A" Baseball League, makes its home debut at Lambrick Park, May 3.

Merchants will open the season against Vancouver Pharoahs the previous weekend, April 26.

Coached by Randy Price with Jeff Owens as assistant and Gerry Lister as pitching coach, the Merchants will play a 36-game schedule against teams from Surrey, Burnaby (2), North Shore, Vancouver and Richmond.

Merchants will also play 12 exhibition games against teams from Victoria's Senior A League.

A non-profit club sponsored by local businesses, Merchants will play league games on weekends.

Saturday games will start at 5 p.m. at Lambrick Park and Sunday double-headers at Topaz at 1 and 3 p.m. Games against senior A clubs will be held on Wednesdays.

Merchants hope to rejuvenate interest in baseball at the junior level, showcase Victoria talent to the Northwest, and to ultimately bring the Canadian junior championship to the city.

Last year Surrey won the provincial championship and finished third in the nationals.

Sixteen players have been trying out for the club and others in the 16-21 age category are welcome to try out.

Those interested should contact Price (477-7748) or general manager Dennis Wiewidrowski (384-7518).

The Captain's Palace Restaurant
VICTORIA
BRITISH COLUMBIA

The Captain's Palace Restaurant celebrates its 10th Anniversary and looks forward to continuing the tradition of serving fine food in elegant surroundings to Victorians and visitors

THANK YOU, VICTORIA

OPEN 365 DAYS OF THE YEAR, SERVING BREAKFAST, LUNCH, AFTERNOON TEA, DINNER FROM 7:30 A.M.

Victoria's Unique Heritage Home Restaurant

This magnificent mansion with its quaint pepper shaker tower and open verandas was built in 1897 for Mr. W. L. Pendray, a prominent figure in the history and development of Victoria. Every detail of the home, from hand-painted frescoes to elaborate stained glass windows and doors is an echo of the opulence of that era and has been faithfully restored and preserved as the Captain's Palace by hosts Florence and Bill Prior. The entry foyer door opens to a glowing fire in the richly panelled receiving room. Many guests choose to have cocktails or after dinner liquers in this cosy area. Each room has its own special charm. The original family dining room features frescoed ceiling and walls. An elaborate fireplace and built-in buffet display a priceless array of antiques from the Prior's private collection. The unique library features a hidden panel door, while other rooms display art and antiques, and views over the busy harbour. The highlight of your evening is the serving of a "Tree Climber", a drink that arrives in an enormous cut glass champagne goblet, served by personnel costumed in the upstairs/-downstairs motif, who are renowned for their genuine hospitality. For those who lodge in the exquisite suite "above the stairs", one of these young ladies answers your call on an old-fashioned bell pull. Breakfast is included in your accommodation rental. The Captain's palace has extensive breakfast, luncheon, tea or dinner menus, seven days a week.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

A fabric shop you'll revel in! . . .

Don't know about you, but the look and feel of exquisite fabrics gives us a sensuous delight that's like a caress! We were treated to this delight on our first visit to the Fort Fabric Garden last Monday . . . and if YOU haven't been there yet . . . lose no time in experiencing the joys of this specialty shop with fabrics from all over the world! . . . Just a few examples of what we saw there this week . . . Dupioni silks from India . . . in brilliant, jewel-like colors . . . Pure silk dress panels (takes two to make a dress) from France and Italy . . . in various colors and designs . . . just enough of each to make one, or at the most two dresses . . . so you can really be exclusive! . . . Gossamer Indian sheer prints with a gold stripe, and 100% silk with a gold thread that will not tarnish . . . Panels are 36 to 40 inches . . . Beautiful irridescent Tai silks with warp thread in one color and weft in another are nothing short of gorgeous . . . We saw Liberty of London wool challis and other dress-weight wool challis from France and England . . . Mohair souffle coatings . . . which you'll find nowhere else in Victoria . . . and alpaca and wool coatings from Italy . . . so rare they're almost extinct! . . . Not to mention 10 and 15-oz. pure camelhair coatings . . . 100% cashmere suiting with a herringbone weave . . . and real suede pelts large enough for a full-length coat . . . For beautiful fabrics, visit . . . Fort Fabric Garden, 747 Fort St., 385-9331

This is the year of the suit . . .

Fashion has been flirting with THE SUIT for quite some time . . . but the full flowering of this lovely way of dressing is now at hand . . . and you'll find suits to suit every woman . . . of every age . . . with any type of figure . . . at Miss Frith's right now! . . . There are suits for spring which will carry you right through the fall season . . . summer suits . . . tailored suits . . . soft suits of the type we used to call "dressmaker" . . . in every kind of fabric, texture and color you can name . . . from nubby silks to those suede-like fabrics every woman covets! . . . So if you're suit minded . . . do visit Miss Frith's and pick out the perfect suit for you! . . . And while you're at it, go look at the hats . . . crowning touches for this year's lovely suits! . . . If you saw Miss Frith's "Parade of Hats" at the Princess Mary last Wednesday, you'll know exactly what we mean when we tell you that hats this year are something to be reckoned with! . . . Shapes have style and elegance! . . . Mostly straws in baku or bal . . . there are curvy brimmed hats . . . small hats . . . flirtatious little hats that look like the one our great-grandmother is wearing in that treasured tintype we have of her! . . . Trimmings are minimal yet imaginative . . . flowers are put on in unusual ways . . . some hats are real crowd-stoppers! . . . See them soon at . . . Miss Frith Fashions, 1619 Douglas St., 383-7181.

Blouses to complement and compliment . . .

Next to suits in importance this year are blouses . . . As a matter of fact, they're just AS important now we come to think of it because you'll want them for topping separate skirts and slacks . . . wearing under shirt dresses . . . Wilson's have a selection of blouses such as we've rarely seen! . . . Their new Liberty cotton blouses are in . . . Delightful prints in the familiar shirt style . . . and a new style with mandarin collar (be sure to see the navy one with small camel-colored leaves . . . Great with a camelhair suit!) . . . Priced from $45 to $55 . . . New this year are shirt blouses in Liberty cotton voile, tagged at $57 . . . While the Liberty pure silk shirts are simply heavenly! . . . $85 for these . . . Sizes 8 to 18 . . . Same size range in the new Viyella blouses which have just arrived at Wilson's . . . These latter . . . in plains, florals, tartans and confetti dots . . . are cut larger over the hips so they fit extra well if you don't happen to be a bean pole! . . . Two styles . . . shirt and a soft style with a little loop-tied collar . . . $38 to $49 for these really nice Viyellas . . . One thing we should point out . . . don't buy your Viyella or cotton blouses to fit . . . always get one size larger, for there's always a bit of shrinkage . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177, and 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Outdoor furniture to INVEST in . . .

It's rapidly becoming the season for outdoor furniture . . . and Standard, who have been reaching out all over for the finest in garden furniture, feel that nothing on this continent equals the Brown-Jordan garden furniture from California they've carried in the past . . . So it's back again this year . . . more beautiful than ever! . . . This is the kind of outdoor furniture you find around pools and in the gardens of those posh, expensive resorts in the U.S. . . . A far cry indeed from the mill-and-run of garden furniture sold in supermarkets or even department stores . . . which lasts a couple or three summers IF you're lucky! . . . Brown-Jordan outdoor furniture is made to last! . . . We know of people who collect it and are still using pieces 12 years old! . . . Those we saw at Standard this week included chaise, spring chair, regular chair, ottoman, table with tempered glass top and umbrella and low side table . . . Made of metal with baked-on enamel finish and honey colored vinyl lattice . . . Chairs are really comfortable . . . give excellent support . . . And everything can stay outside in the sun and rain without deteriorating . . . then brought inside during the winter and used in the house! . . . This furniture is not cheap by any means, but it's worth investing in . . . and Standard are really pleased because they expected a price increase which failed to materialize! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Big reduction on quality luggage at McMartin's . . .

There's a lot more you need to think about when buying luggage than smart styling and pretty colors . . . as we can attest to after our past weeks of travelling in the Middle East and seeing the kind of punishment people's luggage can be subjected to! . . . But the Samsonite Caribbea III luggage which we saw at McMartin's this week gives you the best of two worlds . . . Smart streamlined styling . . . an array of attractive colors . . . and unbelievable sturdiness and capacity to take everything handed out! Moreover, right now . . . and for as long as it lasts . . . McMartin's are selling their Caribbea III soft-sided luggage at 20% off the regular price! . . . There's everything from tote bags right up to 29" pullmans . . . in a choice of tan, blue, rust, fawn, navy and brown . . . plus a man's 3-suiter in navy, tan or dark brown . . . If your present luggage isn't all it might be, we suggest you visit McMartin's real soon and remedy the situation! . . . Samsonite's Saturna III . . . a hard-sided line of luggage . . . is being sold at 25% off the regular price . . . Two colors . . . blue and navy . . . This, too, is a very strong case and will take a tremendous beating! . . . All McMartin's handbags . . . leathers, vinyls, canvas . . . are still marked down 15% but if you want one, hurry . . . because it can't last much longer! . . . Some whopping reductions on smart billfolds and French purses . . . McMartin's Leather Goods, 1605 Douglas St., 384-6613.

Classic beauties by Bischitz and Jaeger . . .

While the style of Bischitz dresses and tops from Austria remains practically ever the same . . . because it's so timeless and classic and universally becoming . . . it's always a bit of an event when new things with this label arrive here! . . . Colors and patterns seem to get more beautiful every year, as you'll realize when you see the two-piece print dresses by Bischitz which have just arrived at Charmante's . . . Beautiful border prints with short or long sleeves . . . in shades of navy and white . . . wedgewood blue with a touch of navy, and royal blue prints . . . Blouse tops from the same manufacturer . . . either short or long-sleeved . . . in navy and white, rose print and wedgewood blue . . . make elegant toppers for a plain skirt or pants . . . A very attractive group from Jaeger . . . skirts, blouses and sweaters which co-ordinate . . . is just in, too . . . There are two skirts in a wool and linen blend . . . One is plaid in a soft blue, pink and a touch of gray, with pleats in the front and plain back . . . The other, a blue plaid with a touch of beige, has one pleat back and front . . . a simple little short-sleeved shirt in pure cotton . . . same shade of blue as that in the skirts . . . teams up beautifully with either one . . . and there are pure wool pullovers and cardigans with long sleeves in the same shade of blue . . . Knitted cotton counterpane has historical connections

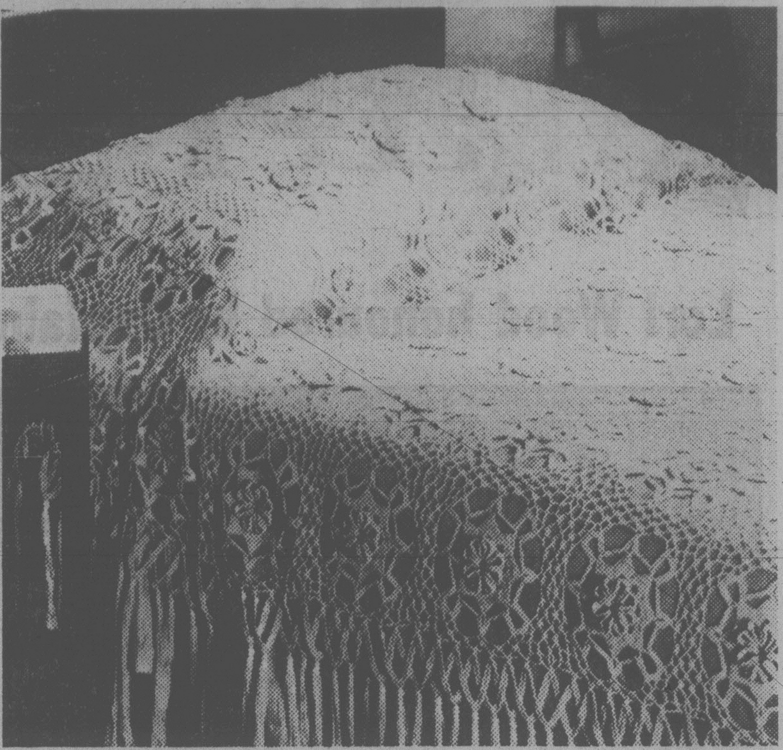
Knit & Chat with May MacLean



Bedspread credited to Calvin Coolidge's great-grandmother

A few weeks ago I gave ideas and suggestions for knitting and crochetting with cotton that will help pass away long evenings. I have received quite a number of letters from ladies who would like to know if I have any knitted doilies or knitted bedspread patterns.

I have a particular favourite which is quite an old pattern, well over one hundred years, in fact it has been handed down as Mrs. Coolidge's Great-Grandmother's Counterpane. Now Calvin Coolidge was President of the U.S. from 1923 to 1929, so you can see how old this pattern must be.

I will point out here that the instructions have the old fashioned terminolgy and that the abbreviation "n" means narrow or knit two stitches together, while "s & b" is slip and bind, or as we say today, slip one, knit one, pass the slipped stitch over.

The counterpane is an extremely attractive pattern but not one that I would recommend to other than an experienced knitter. As this design is knitted in squares, it is easly portable if you are travelling and want to while away the time. The Leaflet No. is 6949 and it is knitted with cotton.

Leaflet No. 6947 is a knitted lace centrepiece consisting of five large doilies about eight inches in diameter which are joined together to form a circle, with a smaller doiley about six inches in diameter to fill in the centre. If knitted with South Maid or Cronita and a size eleven or twelve needle, these larger doilies would make attractive place mats. An ideal gift for the June bride!

No. 7662 Coronet is a very attractive knitted doiley pattern, and No. 7663 Maytime is another extremely pretty doiley.

If you enjoy knitting with cotton as I do, perhaps you should think about knitting an edging for a tablecloth, or for the turn back of the top sheet and around the pillowcases. The trend now is back to nostalgia and lace edge sheets and pillowcases look so extremely feminine and remind one of the Victorian era.

You can find edging instructions on any baby shawl pattern. Use the metal sock needles with the cotton, as usually there are so few stitches to an edging. For a normal size tablecloth choose an edging which will give you between two and three inches extra depth, but if you are planning a banquet size cloth a deeper edging will look more balanced, I would say at least four inches.

I myself make the tablecloths from wash-n-wear sheets. The material is ideal, the price is right, and, from one single sheet I can cut a seventy-two inch round tablecoth and have plenty of material left to make six good size serviettes!

This week's pattern is another idea for the stay-at-home evenings, only this time the squares are crochet. Easily and quickly made, the squares are then fashioned into this very attractive bedspead.

Perhaps you have a daughter or favourite niece that will be getting married come June, so why not make a treasured heirloom that she can hand down to her daughter!

To order Leaflet No. 7556 or any other pattern mentioned, send 75 cents for each, plus a stamped self addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, KNIT & CHAT, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Quebec, H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. All back numbers of my series are available, price 75 cents each, Catalogue of bazarr and gift ideas, 25 cents, plus a stamped return envelope.

Lace, pleats accentuate feminine 80s

By MARGARET NESS

TORONTO — Canadian fashions will usher in the new decade with a decidedly feminine approach.

The narrow silhouette continues, but has added a feminine flurry of pleats. Some dresses even are flowing. There are touches of lace everywhere. Rigid construction is past history, and fall's widened shoulders are very much modified. Feminine accessories, such as pussycat bows to soften severe lines at the neck, top the fashion news. The waistline is thinly defined by narrower leather or soft fabric belts.

The odd marriage of a world crisis and short skirts seems to have appeared again. Spring is levelling the skirt to 2 inches below or above the knee. But one Ontario fashion expert predicts that most Canadian women will not accept the higher length.

Suits have re-established themselves firmly. Many emphasize the shaped waistline with short boxy jackets. Other jackets ride on the hips. Suits come in various fabrics and blends for a woman's nonstop day, with no particular fabric stealing the spotlight.

Soft gray is making a strong showing in the suit parade. It even has shown up in leather, as in Montreal Leather's walking suit with side slits. However, black and cream remain the top spring colors, alone or in combinations like a black skirt and a black-and-white mix in a short jacket.

Agreeing with the general suit picture are members of the Fashion Designer Association of Canada, composed of 21 members (and 25 associates) who design signature collections.

At the association's spring capsule showing in Montreal and Toronto, its executive director, Mary Stephenson, said: "The suit figures strongly as a wardrobe basic, composed of coordinated or elegantly monochromatic separates. Jacket shapes are fitted with peplums and waist emphasis, or are short and boxy, softly squared at the shoulders."

In spring dresses, Leo Chevalier of Montreal (honored two years ago with the Order of Canada) featured arched shoulders in two floral prints with loose tops. One in bright yellow was edged in orange along the front slit. The other, in red floral, was wrap-skirted with flashes of colored lining. Hugh Garber of Toronto liked the new flow skirt in a pink-blue dotted fabric with gray jacket, blue lined.

The chemise slowly is making a return in a shorter, newer version, even appearing in chiffon.

In sportswear, color is taking on a brighter look as a striped sweater, blue knickers and a yellow jacket or a strapless purple playsuit with a red leather belt. Gabriel Levy of Vancouver brought contrast colors to leather with a reddish leather skirt, a yellow suede top and a lilac leather jacket. Linda Lindstrom of Toronto had a startling combination for evening in a tight-legged black jumpsuit covered by a pink, green and black chiffon wrap coat or a wildly colored chiffon dress.

Although black and white still dominate the spring color spectrum, they often are accented with bright colors. Even John Warden of Montreal has combined his usual spring white or beige with bright red and purple. Popular colors on their own include shades of strawberry pink daffodil yellow, mauve and turquoise.

Dear Abby:

I think I may have a "snappy" answer for the woman whose husband looks so much younger than she.

I am an older (37 and holding) woman who is fortunate enough to be loved by a younger man (20). When we first started going together, over eight months ago, I was somewhat self-conscious about the age difference which was obvious to most. So, just for fun, I had a couple of T-shirts printed up. His read, No, I am not her son. And mine read, No, I am not his mother.

They are fun to wear now and then, and always elicit a comment or two wherever we go. Sometimes we even make a new friend!

All in Fun

Dear All:

If the essence of a good sense of humor is the ability to laugh at oneself, on a scale of 1 to 10 you rate a 10.

Dear Abby:

You suggested that it might be a good idea to invite someone who might be alone to spend Christmas with your family.

I am a widow, and my children and grandchildren all live far away and can't be here for the holidays. I work, so it's impossible for me to visit them. Being alone doesn't mean being lonely, Abby. I have received three invitations so far, and I would much rather spend Christmas Day alone than to accept any of the invitations.

Why? Well, with my limited income, I can't buy gifts for the whole family, or even for the hostess. Second, while the invitations are sincere and well-meant, nobody considers how I am to arrive at their home for the meal.

Third, the meal is usually set for late afternoon, and it is well into the dark of the evening before I can leave and I don't want to go home alone at night. (It's rude to eat and run.)

So I will decline all Christmas dinners, and spend Christmas resting up and eating what and when I want.

If some kind soul knows that an older single person is alone and lonely, transportation to and from the dinner should be provided.

Steady Reader

Dear Reader:

Of course, it's too late for Christmas 1979, but it would be well to remember your words for all of those special occasions in 1980.

Dear Abby:

Our little boy is 8 years old and very much overweight, so our doctor put him on a strict diet. I've tried to keep him on this diet but I can't follow him around every minute because I have three other children to look after and my work to do. My next-door neighbor told me she's seen my son eat the dog food right out of her dog's dish, and also that he eats the bread she throws out for the birds. What should I do?

Troubled Mom

Dear Mom:

Take your son to the doctor for a thorough checkup, and tell the doctor how the boy has been supplementing his diet. And be sure to explain to the boy the dangers of eating out of the dog's dish as well as food meant for the birds.

Write Abby c/o the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4. Remember to enclose self-addressed stamped envelope for her personal reply.

Welcomed springtime sunshine is coming in at a different angle now. Is it spreading across a sofa arm, chair back, light wood table? Prolonged sunshine bleaches and rots fabrics and darkens light woods. A good excuse to rearrange the furniture or add adjustable window shades, which can either block out all light or only a little.

If you think gold jewelry has shot up in price, have a look at fine dinnerware trimmed in gold; one china maker increased the price per place setting by $20. This should remind owners of old china that stacking plate on plate can scratch gold trim, especially when you lift a stack of plates from the cupboard. To prevent scratches, separate china plates with paper plates.

See that your old power mower has good care this year. Motors for many mowers are raising the price of the newest models by several dollars.

White's right for spring-summer wear; but before you invest, consider: Is the garment washable, bleachable? White tends to yellow even while hanging in your closet. Is the fabric thick enough to hide your non-white undies? Will any colored trim "weep" onto the white? Do you know all tricks for spot-cleaning the fabric? Will you wear white to work? Will papers on your desk spot white?

Whiplash case: 'Stick to your guns'

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Two years ago I was in an auto accident. I was hit from behind and immediately had severe pains in the neck. The doctor said I had a whiplash injury and that it would go away with time. Not only did it not go away, but it seems to be getting worse.

And the rottenest part of this entire thing is that I don't believe anybody thinks I'm really telling the truth. Even the lawyers who are handling my case sometimes make me feel that I am complaining too much. I don't want to convince the lawyers or anyone else. I just want to feel better. Is this asking too much?

E.O.

Dear E.O.:

Anyone who has ever had a whiplash injury of the neck appreciates how painful this can be. When the head is suddenly pushed forward and snapped back, a great deal of injury can be done to the muscles of the neck, to the nerves, and even to the cervical spine.

An injury to the muscles of the neck can break tiny blood vessels that lie between the fibers of the muscles. Nature's reaction is to stiffen the muscle and protect it from further injury. The early swelling may leave scar tissue in the muscles that is responsible for long-sustained periods of pain. Injuries to the bony spine of the neck and to ligaments may add to the persistent pain.

A whiplash injury is a very real injury. Unfortunately, the courts are filled with suits involving automobile injuries, many of which are associated with a whiplash injury of the neck. More unfortunate is the fact that many of these people are accused of making a fuss about these injuries only for legal purposes.

This is probably unfair and does a great injustice to the many people who are not malingerers, but rather have debilitating pains in the neck.

"Stick to your guns" and continue to complain to your doctors, for there are many excellent ways by which these injuries may be modified. Special collars and braces, physiotherapy, cortisone and other anti-inflammatory drugs, heat therapy, and ultrasonic vibrations can be used to reduced the severity and the duration of a very real disease — the whiplash.

Dear Doctor:

I have a small growth on my wrist that has been growing larger recently. My doctor says I could have it taken off "if I like." Well, I don't like the idea and I don't know what to do about it.

Mr. G.O.

Dear Mr. O.:

The condition you describe is probably a "ganglion cyst." These cysts occur around the joints and tendons of the wrist. When they are removed they are found to contain a thick, gelatinous substance. They never become cancerous, which is probably why your doctor is not pressuring you to have it removed.

An interesting method of breaking these cysts years ago was to whack it hard with a Bible. There was no religious implication. The Bible was chosen because it was the handiest and the heaviest book in the house! However, "breaking" the cyst is not usually effective because the fluid tends to recur. Surgery is the only way to remove the ganglion cyst.

Dear Doctor:

Isn't it unusual for a young person of 30 to have a stroke? A girl who was working in our office had one. We think maybe the family is hiding something from us.

K.L.

Dear K.L.:

It is indeed possible for a young person to have a stroke. It is unusual, of course, but it does happen. In most instances this kind of stroke is different from the kind that elderly people have. It usually is due to what is known as subarachnoid hemorrage, resulting from a rupture of a blood vessel in the brain.

I am certain the family is telling you the truth. In any case, it is important for you to give the family the support that they need during this difficult period.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of the Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Cat food raider won't die hungry wonderful world of animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: I've tried to give my pet magpie a variety of foods and she eats almost anything. Lately I've noticed her flying down and eating some of the dried food out of the cat dish. Is Maggie finally carrying this variety bit too far? — M. H.

Dear M. H.: Could be if the cat decides Maggie's morsel-sized. As far as her nutrition's concerned, though, high protein dried cat meal could make an excellent supplement.

Dear Dr. Miller: From here on, I'll have very limited funds. But I want and need a dog. I have a particular breed in mind, a preference. Is it worth it for me to pay the money for the pedigree? — O. L.

Dear O. L.: Under most circumstances, your money doesn't buy a good dog but rather a puppy which has the potential to be one. Certainly a pedigree provides some built-in advantages, particularly if you have a specific breed in mind.

Still, there are purebreds without pedigrees and there are mixed breeds who in appearance and temperament may resemble a preferred breed. You are the one to determine how important the pedigree is, but if it comes down to a choice of spending most your money on a puppy and having little left to care for it properly, versus spending little for the puppy and having enough to provide proper nutrition and preventative medical care, you should opt for the latter. Any pup requires some monthly monetary investment and this should be anticipated in the beginning.

Dear Dr. Miller: It's kind of cute to see these two kids munching away on dog biscuits together: Princess, our puppy, and Greta, our guinea pig. I guess this doesn't happen very often. I'm writing only because I want to be sure that dog biscuits can be considered a good diet for a guinea pig. — H. B.

Dear H. B.: As a snack, for sociability purposes, certainly. As a basic diet, Greta could, and should, do better. Dog biscuits are too high in fat, much too high in protein, inadequate in bulk and do not supply ascorbic acid, which is vital to guinea pigs. Since pill popping is a real chore, ascorbic acid powder in water or orange juice on the side or greenery (from kale to green pepper) all provide good "C" sources.

Dear Dr. Miller: If it was discovered that a dog which had been living together in a house with a cat had heartworms would that mean that the cat had heartworms too? — M. A.

Dear M. A.: The cat would be a less likely heartworm victim than would, for example, a second dog, though it's possible. Unfortunately, it can be more difficult to diagnose heartworms in cats than in dogs.

Dear Dr. Miller: If they're going to hatch, how long does it take reptile eggs to do it? — D. W.

Dear D. W.: Ordinarily most reptile eggs will hatch in about two months. They may take considerably longer than this during cool weather. The most reluctant reptilian eggs would have to be the roes of the tuatara lizard. It's eggs require abut 15 months to hatch.

Watering where it's needed

jack beastall

Watering the garden will soon be the main topic of conversation. As usual we shall lament the lack of rain, the amount of time spent on the watering, and the high cost of the water we use.

If we were really concerned about the matter we would look into our present wasteful ways and do something to remedy the situation. We really are not too serious about the problem.

The average gardener could reduce the water bill by one-third to one-half by watering on a regular schedule and applying sufficient at one time to penetrate deeply into the soil.

The greatest waste of water results when the surface soil is dampened every day and the root area of the plants allowed to dry out. To survive, a plant must have sufficient moisture in the soil that is in close contact with its roots, the almost invisible feeding roots, that exist anywhere from 10 to 45 cms below the surface of the soil.

It is obvious that pouring water on the surface of the soil is a primitive way of getting water and food down to the root area.

An underground irrigation system, such as used in greenhouse benches, would be more practical, but to date no simple and efficient system has been designed for the home garden.

A dry soil does not absorb water readily, the tendency being for the water to spread over the surface rather than penetrate, therefore a certain amount of moisture must be present in the soil at all times to provide a path down which further applications can flow.

Locally, the top 30 cms of soil dries out rapidly as rainfall decreases in late March, but cloudy and overcast skies and cool temperatures delude the gardener into thinking all is well.

To save on the amount of water that will be needed later in the season to keep plants in optimum growth, this top 30 cms of soil must be kept moist as the natural water table sinks. This means that watering locally has to start by mid-April. Once the soil becomes dry, approximately four times as much water will be needed to penetrate to root level.

It has been determined that plants growing in local gardens require 2.5 cms of water every 10 days to maintain optimum growth, which amounts to 23 litres to every square metre in which there are active plant roots. Applying this amount every 10 days, regardless of overcast skies or rain showers, will save water and result in better plant growth.

The theory that water should be thrown high in the air to warm before reaching the plants makes good advertising for manufacturers of inefficient sprinklers. The water coming from an underground supply main is far warmer than any raindrop that falls on plants, and it loses most of its warmth when ejected into the air at high speed.

The cheapest sprinklers ever made, those selling for 15 cents in the old "dime stores", were the most efficient distributors of water. The expensive types so popular today are, by comparison, inefficient. This you can prove for yourself.

All sprinklers should be tested for even water distribution as a first step to eliminating waste. It is a simple procedure well worth the little time it takes.

The only things needed are a few empty soup or juice cans all the same size. Set the cans in a line about one metre apart, the first beside the sprinkler and the last at the extreme limit of covereage.

Run the sprinkler for 15 to 30 minutes, then measure the amount of water in each can with a rule. If all cans contain essentially the same amount of water within about 1 mm, the sprinkler is highly efficient. But if some cans are nearly full and others nearly empty you know immediately why you are not getting the results you desire from the amount of water you are using.

Sprinklers which cover a large area have no place in the home garden. First, they have to be operated from one position, therefore the same areas are watered and the same areas are missed each watering day. Secondly, water is wasted on walks, walls, driveways, fences and over the fence whether the neighbors approve or not. Thirdly, to obtain distance from the one position, the water is thrown over the foliage instead of under the foliage where the roots are dry.

A sprinkler that covers a small area and can be placed in a different position each watering day, will use less water, and give better results in plant growth.

Another wasteful practice is to apply water faster than it can be abosrbed by the soil, thereby causing run-off over the surface. If the pressure cannot be lowered to a point where the rate of application equals the rate of absorption, the sprinkler should be run for 15 to 30 minutes, then turned off for an hour.

Watering should never be done in west coast gardens in the evening; firstly because the plants are at their highest temperature and can be severely chilled and set back; secondly, because the air is dry and hot causing loss from evaporation; thirdly, because the chill plus damp foliage overnight encourages fungus diseases.

Always water early in the morning, up to about 10 a.m., when the plants and the soil are at their lowest temperature.

Water one small area each day for around four hours, so that enough water is applied to go down 30 to 35 cms. Do not water the same area for seven to 10 days depending on the amount of compost you have added to the soil. Always place the sprinkler in a different position each watering day.

If you really want to save water, use the small efficient sprinkler on grassed areas and the canvas soaker on beds, borders, and vegetable patch. Every drop of water that oozes through the canvas falls directly on the soil and sinks in; there is no waste.

A canvas soaker will last at least 10 years if hung up to dry between waterings and not left on the damp soil to rot.

Whenever possible, water while it is raining, for this saves a quantity of water because the air is loaded with moisture and evaporation is at a minimum. The rain plus a small quantity of water will sink deeper than a greater quantity applied on a dry day.

Gently spray seeds and seedlings several times a day. There is no need for heavy watering until the roots are well into the soil. In fact better root systems are made when the soil is just sufficiently moist, but not saturated.

Keeping the top 5 cms of soil loose and well cultivated between waterings tends to bring up water from lower level towards the surface, the plants taking their needs as the upward movement passes through the root area. A compacted surface allows water to sink beyond the reach of the feeding roots.

When complaining about the high cost of water for the garden don't forget to subtract the amounts used for extra baths and showers in the warmer weather, extra laundry, filling the swimming pool, washing the car every few days, and that wasted by the children trying to drown themselves when the weather turns hot. These vast amounts are not used for the benefit of garden plants.

To reduce your water bill in summer first eliminate all household waste, then follow the suggestions above for watering the garden.

'Deceitful' woman jailed for theft from disabled

VANCOUVER (CP) — A woman described as "deceitful, dishonest and manipulative" was sentenced Friday to 18 months in jail for stealing from the handicapped.

County Court Judge W. A. McClellan said that Cynthia Trudy Hollett, 31, had violated a position of trust in taking more than $9,000 from the Vancouver Resource Society for the Physically Disabled, for whom she worked as a bookkeeper.

Hollett pleaded guilty to one count of stealing $5,538 and was found guilty on another count of stealing $3,540. The offences occurred between June, 1978, and April, 1979.

McClellan said a prison term was a necessity in the case.

"You have to be brought up short and made to realize you can't go on preying on others not as sophisticated as you are," he said.

Hollett stole from people who, with the assistance of the provincial government, are working against tremendous odds to make life a little better for themselves, the judge said.

He said Hollett showed no remorse and his assessment of her was that she was "deceitful, dishonest and manipulative."

Hog marketing board

A B.C. Hog Marketing Commission has been established to monitor and promote the sale of hogs grown for processing in the province, the agriculture ministry announced Friday.

The five-member commission, chaired by John Reams of Aldergrove, will have the power to impose a levy on each hog marketed, but will not have supply management or price-setting responsibilities.

The ministry said a producer will qualify for registration under the plan if he markets or has facilities capable of marketing 300 or more hogs a year for processing.

The ministry also announced that Al Wahl, formerly of the Alberta agriculture ministry, has been appointed provincial swine specialist with the B.C. livestock branch.

The ministry said Wahl will work with swine and other industry leaders in the development of programs.

Before the judge

A 41-year-old man was fined while his 19-year-old son was given a suspended sentence Friday in Victoria provincial court for incidents involving a 16-year-old female member of the family.

The father pleaded guilty Feb. 22 to two counts of indecent assault and was remanded by Judge William Ostler for a pre-sentence report.

The son pleaded guilty Feb. 25 to incest and was also remanded by Judge Harold Alder for a pre-sentence report.

Their names are not being published to protect the identity of the victim of the sexual offences.

The father, who admitted assaulting his daughter Dec. 8 and 9 aboard his vessel, which was docked at Fisherman's Wharf, was fined $500, placed on one year's probation, and ordered to accept psychiatric, psychological, or alcohol counselling as directed.

He must have no contact with his daughter unless she consents and is accompanied by an adult over the age of 18.

Ostler said he was imposing the fine "with some considerable hesitation."

"My own instinct is to send this man to jail," Ostler said.

But he said he would accept the recommendation of the probation officer who prepared the report.

The son pleaded guilty to the sexual attack on his sister Jan. 21 in Saanich.

Alder called the offence despicable because the young man's sister was looking to him for protection, not abuse.

The judge said if the young man had any record or any previous, similar-type of offence, there would be no question of a lengthy sentence.

Alder suspended the passing of sentence but stipulated that if the young man breached any of his probation conditions, he will be brought back before Alder for sentencing.

Two conditions of the one-year probation was that the youth accept any therapy as recommended and not possess or consume alcohol.

A 27-year-old Vancouver lawyer elected trial by judge and jury on a charge of breaking and entering.

Bruce Frederick Havercroft was charged in connection with an Easter Sunday break-in at Mount View Pharmacy, 3892 Carey.

A preliminary hearing date of Sept. 24 was set by Judge Blake Allan.

An 18-year-old youth serving sentences for theft was given an additional three months for shoplifting.

Michael John Tyson, of 3809 Rowland, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Tyson went to Woolworths on Feb. 14, put on a pair of shoes valued at $34.97, removed the price tag, and walked out of the store, leaving his old shoes behind.

Tyson was convicted of theft on four previous occasions, including two counts on March 19 this year. He was given three months on one and nine months on the other and placed on a year's probation.

A 20-year-old man serving a two-year term at William Head federal penitentiary had 30 days added to his sentence Friday.

Ronald George McWilliams, serving two years imposed March 20 for three break-ins, pleaded guilty to driving Feb 8. while his licence was suspended.

Court was told McWilliams was suspended Nov. 19, 1977, for his bad driving record and failure to pay a $75 Insurance Corporation of B.C. assessment.

Mulligan said McWilliams was notified May 15, 1978, that he was suspended until Nov. 30, 1980.

It was his second conviction for the same offence.

Fined for drinking-driving convictions were: Donald Bevell Cole, 51, of 3132 Qu'Appelle, $500; Robert Descoteau, 44, of 847 Villance, $500; Wayne Thomas Thornhill, 23, of 3157 Blackwood, $450; and William Blair Munroe, 19, of 3562 Redwood, $350.

In addition, Munroe was fined $150 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

1,000 donors needed

The Red Cross is facing a threatening and uncomfortable blood shortage.

The agency is appealing to Victorians to help meet the need by attending clinics in the city next week.

The local Red Cross office said that it needs at least 1,000 donors at its clinics here just to meet the daily use requirement.

Because of blood shortages created by the last long weekend, the Red Cross is struggling to build up its blood supply.

Last week hospitals were forced to reschedule operations and the Red Cross slipped below its safety margin in blood stocks.

Since then, long weekend special clinics were held on the lower mainland. While this reduced the immediate shortage, the reserve of donors has been used up for two or three months since donors can only give blood once every three months.

The Red Cross especially wants new donors to come out to the following clinics in Victoria:

Monday, April 14 — Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street, 2:30 — 8 p.m.

Tuesday, April 15 — Red Cross House, 1046 Fort Street, 2:30 — 8 p.m.

Wednesday, April 16 — Belmont Secondary School, 3067 Jacklin Road, 2 — 8 p.m.

Thursday, April 17 — Dunsmuir Secondary School, 3341 Painter Road, 2 — 8 p.m.

Friday, April 18 — HMC Dockyard, 9:30 a.m. — 3:30 p.m.

For further information call 382-2213.

Crashes injure four

Four persons ended up in hospital following two separate single vehicle accidents in Victoria early today.

Nigel Charles Rock, 26, of 3680 Cadboro Bay, is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital with head and back injuries after his truck flipped over at Begbie and Johnson at 2:25 a.m.

Police said Rock and a passenger, Steven Robert Poulin, 24, of 3-2315 Wark were thrown through the windshield when the truck rolled over.

Poulin escaped with only minor cuts and was released after treatment.

In the other accident Gordon Joynson, 18, and Danny Poirier, age and address not known, received head injuries after their car slammed into a tree in the 200-block Esquimalt Road.

DISTRIBUTION OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS PROCEEDINGS BY SATELLITE

The Commission has received applications for temporary network licences from the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation (CBC) and the Cable Satellite Network (CSN) to distribute the Proceedings of the House of Commons by satellite for direct feed to cable systems commencing with the opening of Parliament.

In view of the public nature and general availability of the programming involved, the Commission does not consider that it is necessary to issue an exclusive temporary network licence in this case.

Upon notification by the CBC of the licensees participating with it in a temporary network for the distribution of the House of Commons proceedings, the Commission will issue a temporary network licence for a period of 30 days commencing with the opening of Parliament.

The Commission will issue a temporary network licence to CSN for a period of 30 days commencing with the opening of Parliament.

The Commission is also prepared to issue a temporary network licence to any other group of licensees who wish to form a network to carry House of Commons proceedings.

Any temporary network licences issued will be subject to the condition that only the proceedings of the House of Commons be carried subject to, and in accordance with, arrangements and agreement with the Speaker. Moreover, they will be issued without prejudice to any permanent arrangements which may be approved at a later date.

Cable licensees will be permitted to carry the service on the following basis and in accordance with procedures previously established in Pulic Announcements dated 4 November 1977 and 20 February 1978.

1. Cable licensees presently authorized to provide a special programming channel(s) need only advise the Commission of their intention to distribute this programming and submit full details of the method of feed proposed for the service.
2. Cable television licensees not presently authorized to provide a special programming channel(s) are required to apply for the provision of such a channel outlining the proposed method of feed for the service.
3. Cable systems lacking sufficient channel space to establish a special programming channel(s) will be permitted to carry only the Question Period on the community channel and must notify the commission of such carriage.

10 million ask Quebec to hang in MONTREAL (UPC) — Sixteen mayors from across the country unrolled a 100-foot scroll representing some 10 million Canadians Friday that petitioned Quebec "to hang in there" and vote against independence in the referendum.

The mayors from Victoria to St. John's, Nfld., rallied under grey skies in a gusty wind to present 10 Quebec families with 800,000 signatures urging Quebecers to reject any move towards independence.

"I wish it could have been a sunny day, but at the beginning of the battle you don't need much sun," Victoria Mayor Bill Tindall told a group of inquisitive by-standers in Place Ville Marie plaza.

The "People-to-People" petition was endorsed by thousands of city councillors representing about 10 million Canadians, Contact Canada, one of dozens of unity groups, said.

Nine premiers and lieutenant-governors endorsed the petition, initiated two years ago by Keith Cowan, co-chairman of a committee charged with raising support for the unity drive.

"We've had everybody jogging for us on this petition," said Cowan, who was responsible for recruiting volunteers for door-to-door canvassing.

Ross Alger, the 6' 2" mayor of Calgary attired with a stetson hat, bellowed his support for the federalist cause but was drowned out by the clamor of demonstrating communists and Marxist-Leninists.

"Hang in there Quebec, we love you and we need you for a bigger and better country," Alger said.

He was delighted to see the petition draw a reaction. "That's just good democracy, by golly. You can't get annoyed with people who want to demonstrate."

Later, the mayors lunched with Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau and presented him with the petition scroll.

The boxes containing the signatures will be on exhibit at Central Station for the rest of the week.

Fox backs cable bid for debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The cabinet has rejected a CBC request that it alone be allowed to televise debates of the House of Commons, which opens Monday.

Communications Minister Francis Fox announced Friday that the government refused a CBC request that it set aside a temporary licence given to a cable network to televise Parliament.

The cable company and the CBC both were granted licences by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission to show Parliament at work.

The CBC argued it had pioneered showing the debates and that it alone had a mandate from Parliament to continue the programming.

In a news release, Fox said that allowing the cable network brought up important broadcasting issues that would have to be looked into by communications commission.

One of the issues was that a national satellite cable network had been established for the first time to carry the Cable Satellite Network.

"This fact will impact on the future role of cable and its relationship to the Canadian broadcasting system," said Fox, who also noted that the network, representing about two million subscribers, was composed of about 100 cable companies.

"As a result of the cable licence and as a consequence of their exclusive franchise in the area for which they are licensed, these companies are able to exclude the House of Commons service of any other entity that may be equally licensed to distribute the House of Commons proceedings," he added.

Recreation takeover not Camosun's aim

Camosun College chairman Janet Baird says the college is not interested in complete domination of recreation programs on Saanich Peninsula.

She was replying to concern expressed in a letter from Peninsula Recreation Commission chairman W.B. German.

German told the college board and Saanich School District he was concerned over the prospect of Camosun duplicating services in the capital region.

He said it is feared a number of Camosun recreation programs will conflict with the style, scope and direction of what is now offered by the commission.

Baird said the college does not want to take over recreation and noted the principal had replied to Sidney and North Saanich councils suggesting a co-operative approach would be taken.

School district chairman and Camosun representative Lois Walsh said liaison should be maintained between the college administration and the recreation commission.

"Their fears of being taken over will be alleviated," Walsh said. "But I don't personally feel we can promise there won't be duplication of programs."

The education ministry has adopted a policy that the community college should be responsible for continuing education and recreation programs beyond the Saanich and Victoria areas covered by School District 61, including both Sooke and Saanich district 63.

German, meanwhile, still believes the recreation commission should maintain control over its local programs, even though it means financial support through local taxpayers.

Directors will play it safe

By BRENDA DALGLISH

Better safe than sorry.

That's the policy the boards of Victoria's two hospitals followed recently when they supplemented their insurance coverage with a new policy to protect board members.

The errors and ommissions insurance package provides coverage for board members in the event of lawsuits for such things as lack of good judgment, diligence or good faith, mismanagement of funds, imprudent expansion and failure to attend meetings.

Roy Welham, director of finance at Victoria General Hospital, said the coverage was added on the advice of the B.C. Hospital Association insurance consultants because of a general trend in society to seek legal compensation more frequently.

This type of insurance is common for directors of companies, said Welham, because of the increasing awareness that boards can delegate work but not lose responsibility.

Board members have the final reponsibility for the operation of their hospitals although governments do provide the funding and therefore are being included more often in lawsuits.

One possibly precident-setting case is being appealed now in Ontario.

In that instance, the hospital has been held partially responsible for the actions of a doctor accredited at the hospital.

The incident — which resulted in the patient's death — occurred in the emergency ward when the patient's own doctor was unavailable.

If the appeal fails, it will be the first time a Canadian hospital has been held responsible in such circumstances, said Welham.

And the case has made hospital boards and their staffs take a look at their insurance needs.

VGH will pay $390 this year for the additional coverage which supplements existing liability insurance.

Welham declined to release the total insurance costs paid by the hospital because the policy is in the process of being renewed right now.

Hospitals still take less responsibility in most cases than doctors because it's the doctor who is directly in charge of the patient's treatment, he said.

Municipalities and other government bodies carry similar liability insurance for their members.

Vandals target of B.C.-wide campaign

Vandals will be the target of a province-wide police campaign which gets under way next month.

Details of the campaign, called Taking Aim At Vandalism, were released Friday by Saanich police which along with radio station C-FAX and a local firm, Communications Concepts, developed the project.

Police chief Bob Peterson said a kit containing a 20-minute audio-visual presentation, brochures, and posters is being sent to all RCMP and municipal police forces in the province for use during National Police Week which begins May 11.

Radio and television commercials have also been prepared for airing the same week.

The theme of this year's police week is Working together to prevent vandalism.

Peterson, who is chairman of the crime prevention committee of the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, said the campaign will cost $14,853 with about two-thirds financed by the attorney-general's ministry and the remainder by the B.C. Police Commission.

Victory and defeat

ROBERT FALCON SCOTT: 'A considerate man with a heavy vein of irrationality in his makeup . . . an insecure, unhappy, emotional disciplinarian . . . with workings of a death wish'

WALTER KELLYTHORNE

SCOTT & AMUNDSEN, by Roland Huntford, Musson. $21.95.

"Victory," Roald Amundsen wrote in his memoirs, "awaits those who have everything in order — people call that luck. Defeat is certain for those who have forgotten to take the necessary precautions in time — that is called bad luck."

And so it was with Amundsen's journey to the south pole; and so, too, it was with Scott's.

Amundsen won and lived. Scott lost and died.

How and why the two men and their companions met with such different fates is subjected to a detailed analysis in this book, but the essentials are contained in that laconic statement of Amundsen's. Roland Huntford, though, would add another dimension to the story: the personal characters of the two explorers.

Huntford actually says very little about Amundsen. The explorer seems to have been an elusive, secretive man with an iron will who, Huntford writes, "had no belief in the equality of men; nor did he have a sick obsession with the weak. In any society he preferred the superior being."

Amundsen himself, Huntford makes clear, was just that "superior being", and if such a term echoes the Nietzschean philosophy of the explorer's time — and its modern derivatives — it's difficult not to share Huntford's unconcealed admiration for the Norwegian.

And it is difficult not to share Huntford's contempt for Scott.

Scott, Huntford tells us, was "an insecure, unhappy, emotional disciplinarian." He was also "a considerate man . . . (who) had a heavy vein of irrationality in his makeup."

There's more in that vein as Huntford follows Scott's progress to the pole ("Scott had been so consistently inept as to suggest the workings of a death wish"), but the picture that emerges is clear. Whether it's true or not is as much a matter of preference as of anything else, and from the controversy that Huntford's statements have generated in England it seems that some people find his elementary psychologizing offensive and ridiculous.

Be that as it may, his research on polar exploration is exhaustive and the story smoothly (if often ungrammatically) told.

The south pole had first attracted Cook in 1772; other explorers followed, but it was not until Amundsen landed at the Bay of Whales in 1911 that the pole seemed attainable.

Amundsen had already explored the Arctic and had decided to utilize native dress and dogs in any further travels. Scott, by contrast, insisted on using conventional clothing — and ponies to haul his sledges.

When the ponies died he used men.

There's probably no tale as horrendous in the history of exploration as that of Scott's exhausted men trying to haul their heavy sledges through the Antarctic. Exhausted, undernourished, prone to scurvy, they often made only four miles a day, or none at all while they rested and listened to their leader's rantings. Amundsen's men — on skis and sledges pulled by Greenland huskies — usually travelled at least 20 miles a day.

One figure Huntford offers us is illustrative of the many differences between the two expeditions: Amundsen packed 1,300 pounds of food for each man; Scott packed only 124 pounds of food per man.

Life or death was the final difference.

Scott, of course, became a posthumous hero to the English, his heavily-edited diaries an inspiration for every fading general and emergent schoolboy to do or die.

Amundsen — heavily in debt, bored — learned to fly and crashed in the Arctic in 1925 on a rescue mission for a downed pilot. It is not until now, with Roland Huntford's book, that the full story of both of these remarkable men has been told. It is a tale that will last as long as we yearn to hear of heroes.

ROALD AMUNDSEN: 'Elusive, secretive, he had no belief in the equality of men; nor did he have a sick obsession with the weak. In any society he preferred the superior being'

Fraser's facile fable smothered in detail

DOUG BEARDSLEY

THE EMPEROR'S VIRGIN, by Sylvia Fraser. McClelland and Stewart. $14.95.

The time is A.D. 95, and Emperor Domitian rules imperial Rome. His is a corrupt, cruel court of casual debauchery, dominated as much by its own death-wish as by a desire to rule the world.

As the introductory author's note makes clear, the reader is to make the obvious parallels between Domitian's time and our own. The leisure society, the cult of narcissism, the worship of materialism, mass entertainment, the breakdown of traditional moral values, the increasing divorce rate, the hedonistic pursuit of sexual gratification — these aspects of Roman society, highlighted in Sylvia Fraser's novel, are supposed to make us glance knowingly over our shoulders in anxious identification.

It's a good idea, though hardly an original one — but, unfortunately, the good intentions of the author are not realized by the book.

For her fourth novel Ms. Fraser has given us an historical fiction; a work in which the main events and central characters are, to some degree, historically based. This has led to an unnecessary amount of detail for its own sake. Each color-band on a senator's toga is described, but the accumulated detail serves only to stifle any possible feeling the reader might have for the characters, and therein lies the central problem of this novel.

There is no doubt Sylvia Fraser knows how to tell a good story, a rare talent that has escaped many of our more accomplished prose writers in this country. But in The Emperor's Virgin, the various vestals, knights, and servants have been force-fed so many historical facts, so much detail, that the life has been choked out of them. They cease to live for us as fictional characters, the protagonist being particularly wooden and one-dimensional.

The writing is flat, without energy. A consul is thrown into jail and we are told that he sustained himself each day by trying to "recall the values by which he had lived his life," and seven values are immediately listed, as if in answer to an examination question. Even the much-whispered-about sexual scenes are written in a cold, mechanical manner, devoid of feeling. In short, there's nothing sexy about this book.

A great deal of research and writing have gone into the making of this novel, but Ms. Fraser has given us much better in the past. There's no reason to feel she won't in the future; The Emperor's Virgin is simply an ambitious work that failed to catch fire.

Fascinating folklore

CHARLES LILLARD

THE SALISH PEOPLE: The Local Contribution, by Charles Hill-Tout. Edited by Ralph Maud. Talonbooks. Four volumes, $6.95 each.

Outside the pages of an anthropological journal, it is impossible to review these four volumes (672 pages) as thoroughly as they deserve. Since these volumes cover Hill-Tout's work with the Salish of the Thompson and the Okanagan (Vol. I), the Squamish and the Lillooet (Vol. II), and the Mainland Halkomelem and the Sechelt and the South-Eastern Tribes (Vols. III and IV), quite literally a world of information is presented. Every page is fascinating, and the indices and bibliographies (commonly left out of many B.C. publications of this type) will prove invaluable to reader and scholar alike.

Hill-Tout was born in England in 1858 and died in Vancouver in 1944. As a young man he taught in Toronto, then moved to British Columbia in 1891. In 1892 he was teaching at the St. James School in Vancouver. Later he opened Buckland College, a school for boys. Around the turn of the century he bought land in Abbotsford, where he was a pioneer settler. Considering the time he must have spent researching his articles, it is difficult to imagine him spending much on pioneering. But, maybe he did manage both; Charles Hill-Tout was a hard worker, these volumes attest to that.

Within four years of arriving in B.C., Hill-Tout was busy writing an extensive report to the Royal Society of Canada, which, in the words of Harlan I. Smith, constituted "the first resume of British Columbia archaeology." Due to his report, some sources consider him to be the "pioneer archeologist" in British Columbia. This fact hardly helps us place Hill-Tout's position as an anthropologist.

Hill-Tout worked in the field for less than 15 years. Franz Boas, the father of scientific anthropology in North America, held him in low esteem (if he thought of Hill-Tout at all), and very little critical attention was paid Hill-Tout in his lifetime. Further complicating the picture are Hill-Tout's connections with the English scientific community.

Initially, this group little realized the value of the work being done by Boas, Swanton and Diamond Jenness; also, unlike the others, Hill-Tout worked from notes gathered by others. The suggestion has been made, and it is a valid one, that he was a dilettante. Ralph Maud, in answering this charge, concludes: "His loyalties were to what he saw and heard. We can contradict much of the theorizing he did, but he had a good eye, a good ear, and a good heart. This is where he cannot be contradicted."

Well, Maud can be contradicted, the scientific world is doing it daily. The problem with Hill-Tout is that he was more of a folklorist than a mythographer, more of a writer than a scientist. He wanted to be interesting, so he wrote accordingly. That was his problem, but it isn't ours. What he found fascinating is still fascinating because he was a writer. One can sit down and read The Salish People. Who, in all honesty, can say they sit and read Boas for pleasure?

Two novels: Old pro's moral tale and actor's debut

ANTHONY JENKINS

DOCTOR FISCHER OF GENEVA (Or The Bomb Party), by Graham Greene. Clarke, Irwin. $11.95.

A GENTLE OCCUPATION, by Dirk Bogarde. Clarke, Irwin. $17.95.

Graham Greene's latest "entertainment" will disappoint those readers who expect a fully rounded out tale of intrigue. For despite its expensive format, Dr. Fischer of Geneva is really a long short-story, an expertly managed fable of human greed. Yet brief though it may be, the novella is amazingly rich in meaning.

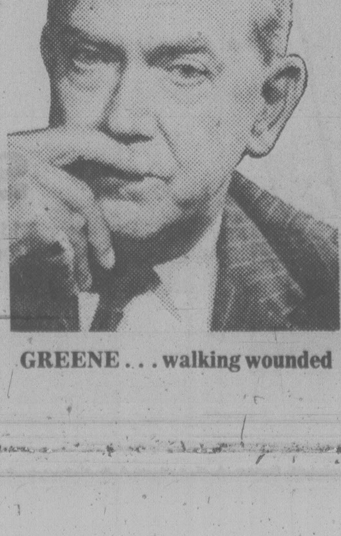
The narrator, Alfred Jones, is one of Greene's walking wounded. An essentially little man of no pretensions to success, he is, in his middle age, completely soured by life's knocks.

His is exactly the right flat voice for this odd little fable, since Jones has come to expect nothing of or from his fellow human beings. So he tells his story in a bleak, understated style whose sparseness encourages us to go beneath the limpid exterior and see the one-dimensional characters as representative of something bigger.

What, for example, is Dr. Fischer himself? On the surface he is a maniacal egotist who gives parties in order to vent his hatred on his supposed friends. No one knows exactly what he is doctor of, but he has amassed a fortune from having invented Dentophil Boquet, a perfumed toothpaste that seems to point to the ridiculousness of our contemporary fad-ridden world:

"... the first advertisements showed a tasteful bunch of flowers. 'Which is your favorite flower?' Later glamorous girls in soft photography would be seen holding between their teeth a flower, which varied with every girl."

Fischer's daughter, with whom Jones falls in love, will have nothing to do with those abominable parties. Having lived alone in her father's white mansion by the lake of Geneva, she has experienced his ill-treatment of his now-dead wife and his sycophantic acquaintances, and has come to see her father as "hell". Yet he behaves like God, seeing into the weaknesses of each of his guests and testing their characters in order to discover each one's breaking point.



GREENE . . . walking wounded

But Fischer is surely neither God nor Devil. He seems instead to be Fortune itself, as he taunts his guests with deluding gifts and watches them debase themselves to win them.

Jones has already had his fingers burnt by life (during the London Blitz he had lost a hand which — significantly — was "left behind somewhere in Leadenhall Street close to the Bank of England"), and so he and his wife are beyond Fortune's lure, though Fischer's attempts to involve them in his schemes cast occasional shadows across their marriage:

"But it was not for his money that I detested Dr. Fischer. I hated him for his pride, his contempt of all the world, and his cruelty. He loved no one, not even his daughter. He didn't even bother to oppose our marriage, since he had no greater contempt for me than for his so-called friends who would always flock to him at a nod. Anna-Luise called them 'Toads,' her English not being perfect. She meant, of course, toadies, but I soon adopted the title which she had given them."

The simplicity of this masks the suggestiveness within each word. Only by the fable's end has one come to see the possibilities behind this picture of a morally maimed Fischer-king in a modern wasteland whose actions move in precise counterpoint to those of the wounded Jones, the eternal little-man.

One perceives their opposition from the fact that Fischer is in toothpaste whereas Jones has a minor post in a chocolate factory. But, more tellingly, one also discovers how love can put one beyond Fortune's reach. For although Jones continues to feel life's buffets, his deepening despair is tempered by the thought of Anna-Luise herself, and the memory of that love makes even death irrelevant and futile.

With a seemingly effortless craftsmanship, Greene shows us the strength of human love and the defeat of Fortune.

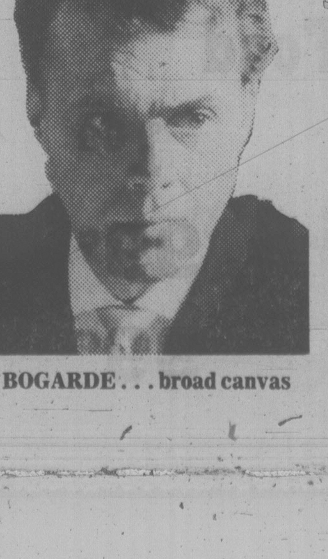
Actor Dirk Bogarde's first novel, A Gentle Occupation, is also about human rapacity and the ends to which people will go for survival. But whereas Greene has chosen a deliberately flat economy, Bogarde creates a multitude of characters who combine in a series of action-packed set-pieces.

The occupation of the book's title is a military one: the arrival of the British on an island in the Dutch East Indies at the fall of Japan in 1945. The Japanese had surrendered to the Indonesians who, wanting their independence, continued to hold the Dutch captive in their internment camps. The British and their Indian troops (also anxious for liberty) found themselves in an impossible situation, with the islanders calling for Freedom, "Merdeka!" and the Dutch blaming their allies for presiding over the disposal of a former empire.

As Bogarde notes in his foreword, "None of us knew quite what to expect in this extraordinary peacetime war which lasted for a little over a year, but we did know, as someone else has said, that we were engaged in 'a mission of mercy in an appalling mess.' "

The novel recreates the ironies within that "appalling mess." The British want only to get home alive; the Dutch find these new occupiers are often well-meaning despite their "treachery"; former collaborators scurry to cover their tracks before the British leave and the Dutch take their revenge. Bogarde knows this world and holds its many threads together with the skill of a natural storyteller.



BOGARDE . . . broad canvas

Such complex relationships demand irony, and the novel's many characters share an ambiguity that swings between comedy and pathos. For, beneath the type figures, Bogarde perceives human multiplicity. His ear for dialogue deftly captures the various shadings within his widely ranging social picture, and he can move from an omniscient and judicially paced narrative into their heads and hearts.

Yet though the minor characters are penetratingly presented, and though the occupied city itself emerges in all its tinderbox moods, the novel's major strand is, I think, something of a disappointment.

The love story between Ben Rooke, a Bogarde-like figure of charm and good looks, and his Eurasian secretary lacks the ironic bite that grips the rest of the book. Although the two both start out by compromising themselves in order to stay alive, they steadily become the conventional romantic couple in a way that betrays the dark comedy of Bogarde's entire canvas.

I wish that Bogarde could have maintained his wry tone to the bitter end that seems called for. Since, apart from that, the novel is impressively managed and amply fulfills the promise he showed in his two unique volumes of autobiography as an unusually sharp delineator of scene and character.

Fine for break-in

A 26-year-old man was fined $1,000 in Victoria county court Friday and placed on probation for one year.

David Richard McAleer pleaded guilty before Judge Peter Millward to breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence at a Gordon Head house on Nov. 22, 1978.

Millward, who said he was going to give McAleer another chance, imposed a six-month jail term in default of payment of the fine.

By AUDREY JOHNSON

At the close of his first season on the podium of Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Dr. Paul Freeman, looking back over the 12 months since he first discussed his ideas and hopes at an Empress Hotel interview, has a lot of positive things to say about what has transpired in the interval.

There are one or two negative angles. He talks straightforwardly about money; what should be, and is not forthcoming, for instance.

"The financial response nowhere near equals the emotional response to the current state of the orchestra's performance," he says. From all sides praises are sung; in letters, phone calls, through encounters — a veritable chorus.

"It's wonderful. But we can't live and continue to thrive on that alone.It's a matter of education. People must realize that in order to continue to enjoy that quality of music — even to sustain let alone improve it — financial commitments must be made.

"The musicians have been working exceedingly hard. In fact the orchestra's artistic development in the past eight months has amazed me. It has already reached a stage I would only have expected it to achieve by the middle of my second season," says Freeman.

The Victoria Symphony is now rated fifth best in Canada after Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and Winnipeg, according to VSO manager Bob McGifford. But the budget is only the 12th largest, a fact that is in itself an eye-opener.

"The point is that we have to raise 17 per cent of our budget annually by private funding or face the loss of a like amount of government subsidy," McGifford points out.

This season has been a record one in VSO history as far as box office revenue is concerned. Audiences have represented 97 per cent of capacity but that still only adds up to 30 per cent of the budget.

On the positive side once more, Freeman finds satisfaction from the progress that has been made in drawing close to other arts organizations in co-operative endeavors such as the Pacific Opera's La Boheme and the Kaleidoscope relationship.

"We're also pleased to have been able to develop a more dynamic situation with the school boards," he says. "The in-school concerts, the children's concert series in the McPherson Playhouse have been highly effective. They've greatly broadened our music-in-education program."

Freeman foresees continuing the use of the Royal Theatre for the main subscription series; "its downtown location suits our audiences". But he hopes to be able to sustain the mini-series at the University Centre's "beautiful auditorium".

Concerning the Royal, he says: "We badly need a new shell and must try to find funds for that purpose. We'll certainly seek the advice of a professional acoustician in the matter. The dissipation of sound upward is very bad; it particularly accounts for the strings' loss of warmth and resonance."

Freeman says that he has been particularly pleased with the favorable response he has had to the unveiling of unfamiliar music.

"It is necessary to provide a historic perspective of what has happened in Canada in the 18th and 19th centuries. Next season we will be looking at history more in terms of the 20th century."

Developments in other Victoria musical organizations interest Freeman. He applauds the appointment of Timothy Vernon as artistic director of the Pacific Opera.

"He is a gifted conductor who is an expert in the operatic field. It's an excellent decision."

It is also refreshing to hear a VSO conductor praise the Society's directors and management, particularly board president Dorothy Frost — "who has been altogether fabulous in her support".

About next season: "We'll be announcing it by the end of the month," he says. "We'd hoped to announce it at the final concert but there have been delays with guest artists. The uncertain stuation with regard to Soviet artists has resulted in a rise in other artists' fees and that creates budget headaches for us. But the situation is resolving nicely."

About living in Victoria: "We're enjoying it very much. It's a great place to live. Cornelia and I have made good friends and Douglas (son aged 10) is happily settled into school."

At the present time it seems that there is nothing wrong with the Victoria Symphony that a more perceptive and responsible attitude on the part of the private sector would not alleviate.

Premiere landmark for VSO

By AUDREY JOHNSON

This Sunday and Monday an event is scheduled that is a genuine landmark in the city's musical history.

For 38 years the Victoria Symphony Orchestra has been winding up its season in the spring, but never in all that time with a world premiere of a concerto written by a Victoria composer and dedicated to the Victoria pianist who will perform it.

The composer is Rodney Sharman, 22 in May, whose life has been revolving around the performance and invention of music for 18 of those years.

The pianist is 21-year-old Walter Prossnitz, an artist in the top echelon of young professional musicians who have evolved in this city.

Paul Freeman will conduct the performance in the weekend concerts that will conclude his first season as music director of the Victoria Symphony.

Sharman's concerto was begun in 1978 and finished in March of 1979. It is not in the traditional first-movement form but in a series of 11 short movements or units. The central movement for orchestral tutti is flanked by 10 movements — five preceding and five following — arranged in a symmetrical and balanced format of piano with orchestra and piano alone. Glittering cadenzas for the soloist surround the central tutti.

It is written for a classic orchestra; two oboes, two bassoons, two horns, two trumpets, one trombone and strings.

Says Walter: "It is stylistically rewarding to the soloist. It seems to me to be the best I have seen of new concertos; so many contemporary concertos are not in the least bravura as this one is."

He points to a considerable amount of harmonic writing in the strings. Sharman describes the over-all character of the work as sombre.But this mood is contrasted, one discovers, by the shining energy of many solo piano passages.

From a purely calligraphic point of view the score looks beautiful, the whole thing, including the orchestral parts, being the quite exquisite work of the composer.

Prossnitz, Sharman and Maestro Freeman at rehearsal this week

Dr. Freeman says such musical calligraphy is in itself rather rare among composers. "But quite apart from that aspect, there is absolutely no doubt that Rod is an extremely gifted and creative musician," he comments.

Sharman came to Victoria at the age of 15 from his native Saskatchewan, having already done some composing and being self-taught on clarinet, oboe and flute. He immediately took up studies at the Conservatory of Music with Murray Adaskin and Jan Menting.

At this period he composed pieces for solo piano, two string trios, songs, solo pieces for violin and oboe and piano; an Adagio Concertante for large orchestra, Concerto for Flute and Orchestra, and two theatre scores.

He entered the Bachelor of Music program at UVic in 1976, studying composition with Martin Bartlett, John Celona and Rudolf Komorous and producing a number of works in the ensuing three years.

He has been associated musically with Spectrum Dance Circus and Kaleidoscope Theatre. His most recent composition is a chamber opera entitled Orestes.

Rod plans to continue studying composition in Germany next year at the Hochschule fur Music in Freiberg.

Walter, who has studied at the Vienna Academy of Music since completing his studies at the Victoria Conservatory with Robin Wood, is also planning to return abroad for further study.

The Sunday-Monday concerts will also feature Walter in the brilliant Prokofiev First Piano Concerto.

Dr. Freeman has programmed Richard Strauss's tone poem, Death and Transfiguration and Respighi's richly colored and imaginative Pines of Rome to complete this remarkable 20th century program.

Music binge underway next week

It's all about to start again for the 30th consecutive year — that great annual performing arts binge, the Greater Victoria Music Festival.

With more than 2,000 entries directly and indirectly involving at least 10,000 Victorians of all ages, it is one of the most highly organized and happiest events of the year.

It is also self-supporting, operates in the black — and while precise statistics are not available, is certainly one of the biggest events of its kind in North America.

The first few days of this year's festival are occupied with dance and one day of accordion classes. Proceedings begin Thursday at Lansdowne Secondary School.There the gymnasium will be filled with music and color Thursday and Friday as approximately 900 school children perform an enormous variety of folk, country and creative dances.

Schools entered include James Bay Community School, Marigold, View Royal, Monterey, Braefoot, Glanford, Fairburn, Campus View, St.Andrew's, Uplands, Renaissance, Torquay, Brentwood College, Lansdowne, Willows, St.Patrick's, Cordova Bay, Glenlyon and Craigflower.

School participation ends Friday afternoon and the traditional and popular school dance honor performance will take place May 1 at Central Junior.

The balance of Friday afternoon and the evening session, Friday, will present a variety of authentic ethnic dances performed by clubs and individuals.

Participating are Royal Oak Artistic and Rhythmic Gymnastic Club, Edelweiss Mardi Gras Dancers, Dance Village, Krakus Polish Dancers, Veselka Ukrainian Dance Ensemble, Portuguese Children's Folklorique, Parmenter's Dance Group, Sons of Norway, Danzas Y Tradiciones Mexicanas, Les Cornouillers, Sampaguita Dance Troupe, Victoria Morris Men and Victoria Spanish Dancers.

Highland dance has its own section in the festival and will occupy a full day and evening Friday, and Saturday morning and afternoon at St.Matthias Church Hall.

Entries in the piano accordion classes are well up this year. They will keep adjudicator Diane Schmidt occupied for a very full day, Friday at St.John's Anglican Church Hall. Schmidt has appeared as guest soloist with various symphony orchestras, including the Seattle Symphony under Milton Katims, and with the Philadelphia String Quartet.

These dance and accordion classes provide an attractive overture to the full volume of the festival. Speech arts and studio dance begin Monday, April 21.Piano, which occupies two centres for two weeks, vocal classes, strings, woodwinds, brass, bands, school choral, adult choral fill the last two weeks of April with the sound of music and the whole thing winds up May 5 with the Festival Highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse.

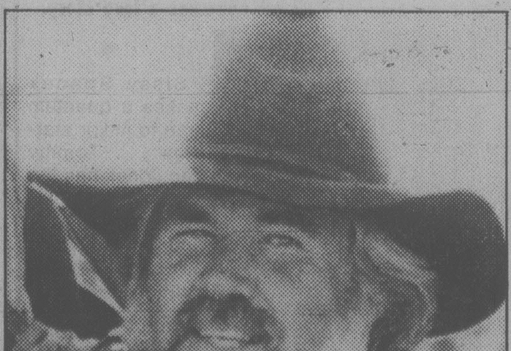
Canadian songbird Anne Murray will be seen Saturday live from New York. She will appear on NBC television's Saturday Night Live with host Burt Reynolds, whom she met when the two were guests on the Dinah Shore show earlier this year. Last week, Murray won four Juno awards, but was absent from the Toronto ceremonies because of the death of her father in Springhill, N.S.

John Travolta's comeback attempt — after the disastrous Moment by Moment — is almost finished. Travolta will dance again in Urban Cowboy, but to the twang of country rather than the thump of disco. The film is about a young man who works in an oil refinery in by day and moves through the country bars at night. The movie is directed by James Bridges, of China Syndrome and Paper Chase fame, and features music by The Eagles, Boz Scaggs, Joe Walsh, Jimmy Buffett and Dan Fogelberg

Loretta Lynn may be the first lady of country music, but she's the first to admit she's out of her class in any duet with Luciano Pavarotti. She's teamed up with the reigning tenor of New York's Metropolitan opera for a segment of Marble Arch's new ABC-TV special Omnibus. Said she to producer Bob Shanks, after the cameras stopped rolling on Pavarotti's rendition of La Donna e Mobile, "I ran out of breath about two hours before he did!"



Kenny Rogers . . . soaring stakes

"You've got to know when to hold, know when to fold up," and in Kenny Rodgers's case, know how to spend your winnings. The country and western star whose TV acting premiere came in a film loosely based on the hit record The Gambler, has spent his on refurbishing an 80-passenger BAC-111 jet aircraft. The plane now seats 21, but there is plenty of room for poker. "Kenny loves to play cards," a spokesman for his band said. The plane will be used to get Rodgers and his retinue to various engagements on upcoming tours.

Brooke Shields is in London taping a segment for the Muppet Show ... John Huston will travel to Hungary this month to start filming the Freddie Fields-Lorimar production Escape to Victory, costarring Sylvester Stallone, Michael Caine, Max Von Sydow and Pele ... Carol Lynley has just completed a television pilot titled Cages in Hollywood.

Runyon characters lost in Miss Marker remake

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Andrews, Stimson and Matthau . . . not enough life

Despite of Walter Matthau's grimaces, little Sara Stimson's pixie grin and Julie Andrew's charm, Little Miss Marker is a lacklustre movie. The Damon Runyon characters are practically lifeless and the plot lacks sparkle and vitality.

The Jennings Lang remake of the movie that made a star of Shirley Temple in 1934 also suffers from an overdose of cutesiness from the opening credits to the fairytale ending. Well-publicized child discovery Sara Stimson, who plays "the kid," is sweet and appealing, but her talent just doesn't match that of the current darling, Justin Henry (Kramer Vs. Kramer). The chemistry between Henry and co-star Dustin Hoffman in Kramer doesn't happen in Little Miss Marker. Seven year-old Sara will have to make it on her own.

Matthau is coerced into a partnership in a gambling house with a flamboyant gangster named Blackie (Tony Curtis) and a destitute socialite named Amanda (Julie Andrews).

Regret, Sorrowful's assistant, is played by Bob Newhart who looks like he's still in the role of television's favorite psychologist and has just wandered onto the wrong set. Lee Grant has a small part as a wise-cracking family court judge.

Since the plot is flimsy and a great deal depends on the characters. Unfortunately, the movie is marred by unremarkable performances. The stars seem to strain to be funny and fail to shine most of the time.

The best comedy is in a scene at the track where Amanda's horse Sir Gallahad, the slowest nag in town, is in a race rigged by Sorrowful. The attempts of the bribed jockeys to slow their mounts so Gallahad can keep up are hilarious.

But the romanticized underworld of Runyonesque characters — full of good-hearted gangsters and shady ladies — is not enhanced by this third attempt to bring Little Miss Marker to the screen.

What may be a Farewell Tour by the Vancouver Radio Orchestra, and is being billed as a "John Avison Farewell" started out this week on a northern trek. But conductor Avison, in declining health, is not with his 22 piece ensemble.

His place has been taken by Timothy Vernon, recently appointed musical director of Victoria's Pacific Opera, and currently music director of the Canadian Opera Company on tour. The orchestra will give a total of 23 concerts and school programs. Administrator George Zukerman says: "We started out touring to remote areas with Canada Council assistance in an era when nobody took orchestras much further afield than New Westminster. Now there are other groups in our larger Canadian cities who can take on this vital responsibility for audiences outside the major centres."

The farewell tour lasts until April 24 . It's assisted by grants from all the regular sources but it is noteworthy that the communities themselves have participated with a record contribution of more than 72 per cent of the total budget.

Guitar lovers, this is for you. And players take special note: On Wednesday there is to be a fine duo concert by Michael Strutt and Bryan Townsend. It's at Christ Church Cathedral at 8 p.m. and will include works by Brahms (a recent John Williams arrangement of the Theme and Variations), Fernando Sor, Bach,Couperin and Scarlatti and the Spanish masters, Albeniz and Granados.

Both artists have had considerable concert experience and have studied with the foremost masters. Before returning to the West Coast, Strutt taught guitar and lute for six years at McGill University and the University of Ottawa.

Townsend is currently head of the guitar department at Victoria Conservatory of Music instructor at UVic.

A one-day master class is to be given at the Conservatory on April 27 by Pepe Romero, one of the world's top classical guitarists.

Registrations for the class are being taken now. There is a player's fee of $50 and an auditor fee of $15. Those wishing to play should send a short tape to the Conservatory in care of Stephen Elliott. For further information phone him at 388-4751.

The class will take place at the Conservatory's new location, 839 Academy Close (off Quadra behind St.Ann's Academy) from 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.

News of his election as an active member in the prestigious American Watercolor Society has been received by noted Victoria artist, Brian Travers-Smith.

The AWS is the oldest and largest organization of watercolor artists in the United States. Only a handful of painers who meet the Society's exacting standards are accepted each year. The roster of members includes such famous names as Winslow Homer, Edwin A. Abbey, George Bellows and Andrew Wyeth.

It is an honor society in that membership may not be sought nor claimed. Active membership is offered only to outstanding watercolorists after nomination by a committee especially elected for this purpose.

Candidates for election are usually drawn from the ranks of those non-members who have participated several times in showings at the Society's annual exhibition, held in New York in April.

Two west coast artists are currently showing in the event. They are former Victorian Allan W. Edwards, now living in West Vancouver, and Brian R. Johnson, 1050 Monterey.

Good news for loyal Victorians: the Summer Smile Show will be back in the Empress Hotel this summer, opening its 28th year on July 4 and carrying on through Sept. 6.

Originator Jerry Gosley is sticking to his retirement decision and has handed over management to son Anton. But Gosley senior, still active with convention productions, says he will be around as consultant.

In the meantime experienced versatile performers are being sought for audition at the Bebe Eversfield Studio, 1318 Broad. The date is April 23 at 7 p.m. Liz Gorrie will direct and Paul Liittich will be a lead performer. Contact by phone, 477-6394 and 598-1819.

Choir tackles big work

One of the lesser known Handel oratorios is the subject of a full-scale presentation by the choir and soloists of First United Church. Solomon, a work of pageant and splendor, will be performed Saturday, April 19 at the church, corner of Balmoral and Quadra.

The oratorio is in three acts but only two will be sung on this occasion. Act I is concerned with Solomon's piety and marital bliss, tactfully avoiding mention of his biblical 700 wives and 300 concubines. Act II portrays the wisdom of Solomon, presenting the famous scene concerning his judgment in the case of the baby and the two mother-claimants.

The work is being performed under the direction of Timothy E. Nagurski, music director of First United since June 1979. Organ accompaniment will be provided by Norman Hurrle, a former Torontonian who has established a fine musical reputation in Victoria as a choral director and organist.

Soloists are Ginny Kidd, lead soprano of the choir, who will sing the roles of Pharoh's daughter, the First Woman and the Queen of Sheba; Frances Pollet, director of music and organist at St. Matthias Church, sings the Second Woman; F. Scott Ritter, tenor, is the Narrator, and baritone Lanny Pollet sings Zadok the Priest and Solomon.

Tickets can be purchased at the door.

Tough road

DENVER (AP) — Robert Redford — in Denver to narrate commercials for the National Wildlife Federation — says the Utah Highway Department is one of the stubbornest bureaucracies he's ever battled in his crusade for conservation.

He fought the department for 10 years over an eight-lane highway he contended was damaging to the ecology. He didn't win, but says they finally did consent to some route changes.

"The highway department mentality is that a clean, straight, wide highway is the best highway. They had no regard for the environmental impact this road would have, but trying to buck the highway department is next to bucking God."

Jetfoil firm chief named

Pat Crofton has been elected president of the Flying Princess Transportation Company, which will run the jetfoil between Victoria and Seattle.

Crofton, 45, a former lieutenant-commander in the navy, describes himself as semi-retired.

He operates a small farm on Prospect Lake Road and has several business investments in the area.

The Flying Princess Transportation Co. is a federally-chartered non-profit organization which will run the jetfoil on behalf of the community.

It has signed a six-month lease with Boeing for the peak tourist season this year, starting May 15.

Crofton said a 12-member board of directors will be elected.

The FPTC was put together by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Cedric Steele who now has no direct connection with it.

Crofton is not a chamber member and there is no continuing link between the two organizations, although some chamber members are expected to be elected to the board.

The FPTC has applied for a liquor licence and is hiring crews for the jetfoil. Because Boeing is supplying the crew as part of the lease agreement there will be no Canadians hired during the six-month period.

However, the FPTC has an option to buy the jetfoil when the lease expires.

Crofton said special events will be organized for the inaugural run of the jetfoil service in mid-May.

Planning is still under way.

Fare for the two-hour trip will be $25 one way, in U.S. funds.

Crofton said he decided to get involved in the program because of his navy background and his ample free time.

"This is a non-profit venture and I felt I should do something for the community."

He said the jetfoil is Victoria's response to an emergency created by the provincial government's decision to stop operating the Princess Marguerite.

The Queen of Prince Rupert is not nearly big enough to handle summer traffic, he said.

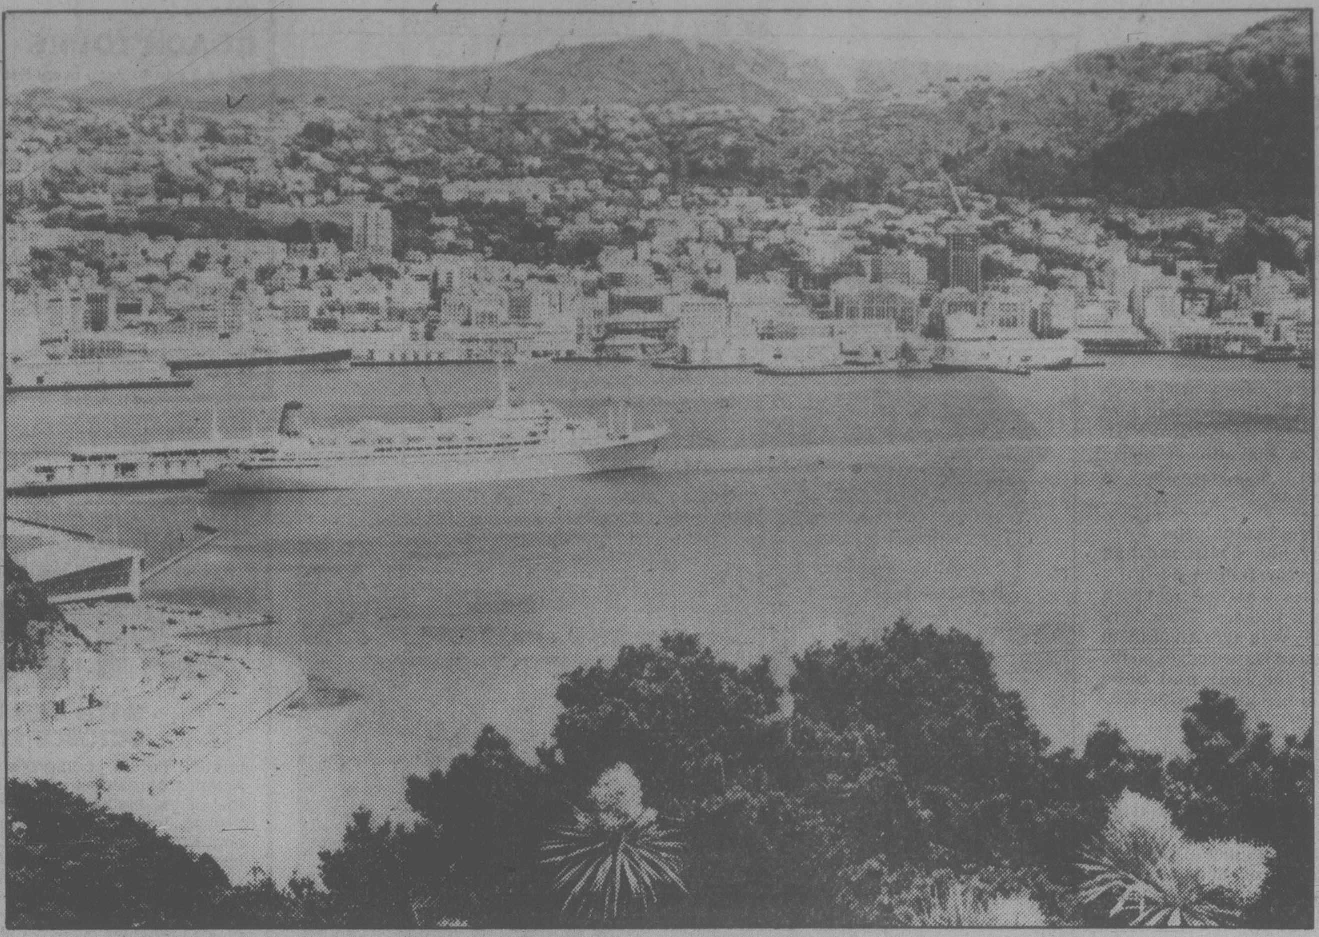
New Zealand mirrored in capital

By PHILIP SOUSA



Wellington crawls up hills forming tiers like an amphitheatre, with the harbor its stage

WELLINGTON, New Zealand — Capitals seldom serve as a true mirror of their nations. But this one does.

The bulk of the natural and human features of what some say is the world's largest and best-run farm unfold in pleasing, easy-to-absorb portions.

Just a bit smaller than California, mostly mountainous New Zealand is hugged by water, blanketed with luxuriant trees, festooned with flowers and spotted with the plump balls of white and brown wool that represent its more than 65 million sheep. The country's population stands at about 3.2 million.

Uncrowded, compact, easygoing, casual and scenic.

That's New Zealand. And that's its wind-scrubbed capital.

Perched on the southern tip of the North Island, Wellington is also the nation's commerce and communications hub. It is also the principal gateway to the more alpine South Island, three hours away by ferryboat.

Despite its role as the seat of government, however, a sense of permanency permeates the town. And the institutional look peculiar to other capitals is refreshingly absent.

Most of the older government buildings are graceful examples of neo-Gothic and Italianate styles. Yet, there is harmonious contrast, the most striking example being the new round "beehive" housing Parliament's executive wing.

Across the road, standing like a waylaid stone palace, the old departmental building is one of the largest wooden structures in the world. Even the stately columns supporting its various entrances were carved from native kauri trees — but the light tones and texture of the paints coating the wood trick the eye into seeing smooth and solid stone. Erected 104 years ago, this ingenious sample of Wellington's early architecture is now headquarters for the department of education.

Further contributing to the absence of a monotonous "government look" is the fact that the various ministries and departments often stand next to stores, apartment houses and other private enterprises.

While not quite invisible, the corridors of power run behind mostly discreet buildings easily missed unless one is on a guided tour.

Wellington crawls up and down hills that form the tiers of a natural amphitheater with a magnificent harbor as its stage.

As elsewhere in New Zealand, clean waters, wooded hills and flower-crowded green spaces are practically always in sight.

For the visitor, one of New Zealand's most rewarding characteristics is an alternative to crowds and push buttons. There are few of either.

Art galleries abound. So do artisans' studios. The respected New Zealand Symphony Orchestra and the National Ballet Company are both based here. And the city supports a large number of independent musical and theater groups.

As seen from atop 650-foot Mount Victoria, the downtown area appears as a small forest of skyscrapers. Nothing like those giants in New York or Hong Kong, but tall enough by local standards. Interestingly, quite a few of these mostly new buildings house very good restaurants.

Most Kiwis, as New Zealanders often refer to themselves, emulate the flightless bird whose name they have adopted by eating simply and exercising a lot. Sports, to them, appear to have more import than gourmet dining.

Here again, Wellington acts as a window on the rest of the nation: By international standards, the food generally can be ranked as modest, but a growing number of quality restaurants — particularly those specializing in continental fare — are changing the picture for the better.

The five-minute cable car ride to the neighborhood of Kelburn is a 25-cent journey into other facets of this city of 350,000 people.

As the new red cars ease noiselessly up the hill, the construction cranes and tall buildings around the waterfront give way to private homes, apartment houses, Victoria University and the 63-acre Botanical Gardens.

Neatness and an abundance of flowers distinguish the homes along both sides of the track, whether they're glass-enclosed A-frames or settler's cottages.

Quite a few of the cottages — built of wood and often tilting as if fighting the gusty winds peculiar to the city — are links with the country's pioneer days.

It was here in 1840 that England established the original settlement of today's self-governing member of the British Commonwealth.

Preceeding those settlers by five centuries were the Maoris, a Polynesian race of Caucasian origin. New Zealand's current population includes about 260,000 of them.

The National Museum and Art Gallery in Wellington has on permanent display an interesting collection of artifacts and exhibits that depict the distinct culture of the Maoris and the life of the early European migrants.

Another attraction here is the proximity of farm country and open spaces, a happenstance common to practically every town in New Zealand.

I discovered that — along with the humor and individuality that seems to abound in every Kiwi — with the help of a local maverick named Wally Hammond.

He operates Wellington Sightseeing Tours Ltd., one of the two local touring companies.

The other is run by the city or, as some locals will tell you, by the City Council.

Hammond's ultimately successful effort to give City Hall spirited competition included more than a few skirmishes, according to some sources. But he persisted and won, to the delight of every Wellingtonian who believes in free enterprise.

Wally's principal conveyance, an aging red and cream minibus, has the owner's rumpled look and is in contrast to the city's sleek, large vehicles. But passengers enjoy his casual approach in describing sights and telling anecdotes as one would with close friends.

My afternoon excursion to the suburbs aboard Hammond's little bus revealed that in this country bush and boutiques are only minutes apart.

Wellington's skyline was still visible behind us when we had evidence of New Zealand's predominantly agricultural nature. Around us were large pasturelands on which grazed healthy sheep, cattle and horses.

We passed Petone, site of the original English settlement, and other bedroom communities of the capital. Above Paekakariki, a hamlet on the west coast, we stopped for a look at the miles of sandy beaches that nestle under tall, wind-whipped hills.

There were a couple of farms half hidden in the rugged hillsides. A narrow road. Few vehicles. A rustling wind was the only sound. And as far as we could see up and down the shoreline, a long ribbon of clean, deserted beach.

Yet, we were less than 30 miles from Wellington.

Italica - where lions ate Christians

with
STAN DELAPLANE

SEVILLE, Spain — The ruins of Italica are among gray-green olive groves a few miles out of Seville. The Roman General Scipio laid it out as a rest camp for the Legions in 208 B.C.

He built a large coliseum where the Roman GIs could go down on Sunday and see some of the population eaten by lions, a popular sport of those stirring times. (It didn't please the local luncheon club since they were the main course. But as the General remarked: "What is good for General Scipio is good for the country.")

Italica grew into a city of 200,000 people. Three Roman Emperors were born here: Hadrian, Trajan and Theodosius.

There is a one-room museum among the olive trees at the end of the sunny dirt road.

The head keeper said he did not care to walk up among the Roman streets as it was too hot. He sent a young boy in a straw hat who pointed out the main street, the main sewer and some fine mosaic floors that have been uncovered.

"And now we see the coliseum," said the head keeper when we got back. It was pretty obvious this was what he was saving himself for.

You walk through Roman gates into corridors beneath the stands. In the center of the arena is a deep pit with columns. The Romans flooded the pit for miniature naval battles. When they wanted to cover it, they put beams across the columns and covered the whole thing with wood.

"Look down," said the keeper. 'Below here, the cages of tigers, panthers and lions.

"Here in the arena 'los Cristianos.

"Below here, the ramp. The lions, tigers and panthers mounted to the arena. Y los comen! They ate them!"

He fell back two paces and looked at me triumphantly. Not every day do you see where they served Christians for a snack.

"How many?" I said.

"Thousands," said the keeper happily. "Thousands of Christians eaten by lions, tigers and panthers."

He was tremendously pleased. He said Italica was one of the greatest Christian-eating arenas in the Roman world.

Italica was famous for three things: It was the only Roman arena that was elliptical instead of round; it was third largest, ranking only behind Rome and Nimes in France; it was famous for its cuisine of Christians.

He sounded off like a representative of the Chamber of Commerce. Not a Christian got away from him.

As a matter of fact, I believe he had developed the story somewhat.

The Civil War left them with nothing to sell. The Allied nations were cool because of Franco's friendship with Hitler during World War II. In the small towns, shops sold thread by the half meter. Sometimes by the inch.

They sold needles one at a time.

There were few tourists. We were the only ones at the time at Italica.

An artist was working in the shade of the coliseum wall, He was copying the tiled Roman floors that had been uncovered. They are intricate mosaic inlays.

He did it with great care. With brush and paint, turning out exact copies that measured six by six inches.

I bought three of them and they are on my wall today.

Afterwards, we drove back to Seville and had lunch at the Alfonso XIII. It's a magnificent place, once it was the palace of the king.

The tablecloths were starched white and had been carefully mended.

The waiters were in black tuxedos. They were shiny with age. All of them showed frayed edges on the sleeves that had been trimmed down with scissors.

The waiter brought me a cold soup.

"It is gazpacho," said the waiter. 'Tipico de la region. After you squeeze the vegetables, you add olive oil, vinegar, water, salt and a little garlic."

The waiter said: "They say that gazpacho comes from an oil and vinegar ration issued to the Roman soldiers. They got it each day.

"And it was in this ration that a Roman soldier dipped the sponge and held it up to Christ as He suffered on the Cross. In the translation it comes out 'vinegar.' But truly it was an original gazpacho."

Gates like this throughout Spain recall Roman past

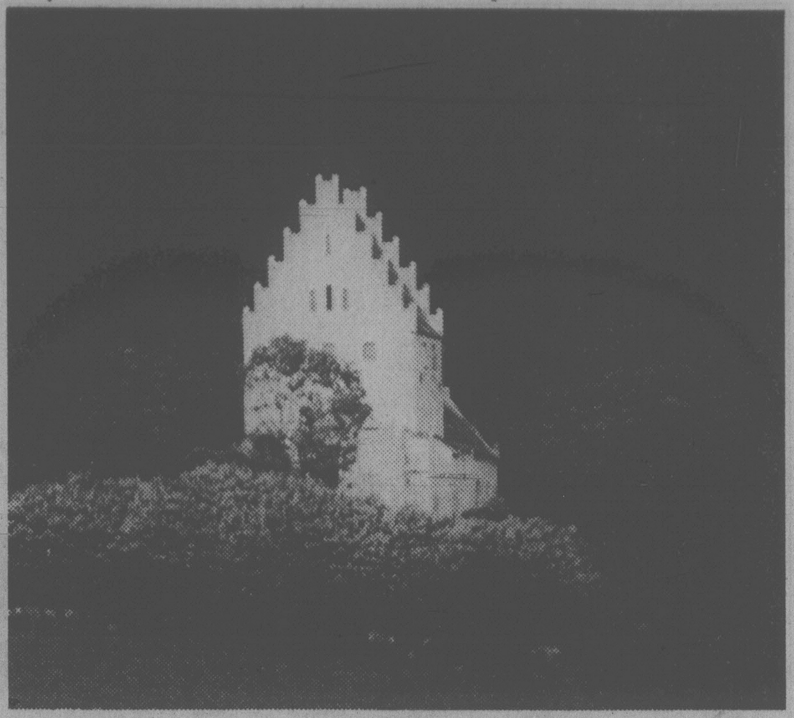
By NEIL MORGAN

JUTLAND, Denmark — Travellers throng Copenhagen, but few visit Denmark's largest island: Jutland, which teems with treasures.

Aarhus, Denmark's second city, with about 250,000 residents, is a university town and trading center that dates to Viking days in the 10th century. To the visitor it is notable for a well-planned collection of old houses gathered from all over Denmark in the Botanical Garden. Almost 60 of them are placed along canals and pathways in the style of a medieval village. Crafters are at work. The aroma of baking and confectionery draws the visitor.



Spotlights highlight Danish church on the Island of Jutland

We stopped for the night at the first of the country inns that my Copenhagen friend had arranged: Kongensbro Kro, near the Jutland village of Ans, about 10 miles north of Silkeborg. Set beside a boat canal, the inn looks down on the grassy path where horses once plodded, pulling canal boats.

Now the path has become a strip for joggers, the canal for canoeists.

There are scores of good country inns throughout Denmark.(look for the word "Kro,")

All that we saw were clean, casual and friendly — and markedly less expensive than equivalent rooms and meals in cities. Kongensbro is renowned for its food, and in Denmark, that implies a high level indeed.

The host and owner at Kongesnsbro for more than 15 years has been Hans Andersen ("No, I am not Christian!") but it is a family affair. Ilse, his wife, is noted as an author of cookbooks (she is at work now on one for children), and their son Ole serves as chef. (His trout in crust with a dill sauce ranked with dishes I've eaten at French restaurants carrying Michelin's third star.)

For the traveller finding his way to his first Danish kro, several things are important:

Call ahead to reserve a bedroom. Ask for a private bath and toilet, if you want, but don't make an issue of it. In most kros they are scarce, and you'll pay for them. Everything you need will be close by and tidy, in any case.

Park your car outside and haul in your bags. There may be no conventional reception or front desk, and the language barrier that exists more markedly in rural areas may result in shyness or be mistaken for coldness.

Seek out a waitress or waiter, if no one else appears, and give your name. In minutes someone will have your room key and lead you upstairs.

Ask about meal hours when you check in. The Danes tend to eat earlier than many foreign travellers. At Kongensbro we were the last to finish dinner at 9.

Breakfast will come to your room — usually a lavish country tray with breads, cheeses, jams and coffee or tea — as part of your overnight rate. Dinner and wine are extra. You may find yourself settling your bill in a dining room corner or across the bar.

I admit to overwhelming fondness for rural travel and rural inns. It is the absence of crowding, and the leisurely pace of proprietors and staff. After we had settled our bill at Kongensbro, Hans Andersen invited us for a stroll on the canal path.

"I know one other couple from California," he said. "I think the name is Muzzy."

"Helene and Ed Muzzy?" we suggested.

"That's it," he said. "They were here once with friends from Manchester."

"They live just across the street from us."

"Ahhh," Andersen said, twinkling. "California must be a very small place, like Denmark."

Cartagena's fortresses held Spanish treasure

CARTAGENA, Colombia — When King Phillip II of Spain was presented with the bills for the construction of some of Cartagena's forts and ramparts, he looked out of the window of his somber palace, and said: "But I can't see them from here."

Knowing that Cartagena was some 5,000 miles away, on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, his ministers looked aghast. But the brooding Spanish monarch soon explained his little joke: "From the millions they have cost I should be able to see them from here."

And this citadel of mighty fortresses, battlements and bulwarked walls still stands today, proud and defiant, a mute tribute to Spanish efforts to protect the treasures of gold and silver, emeralds and pearls, which in the 16th and 17th centuries were loaded here on fleets of galleons for the perilous journey across the pirate-filled Caribbean and the wide Atlantic to Spain.

But 20th Century Cartagena is much more than a huge, open-air museum filled with unique historic and religious relics. It has also become one of the Caribbean's most popular resorts. Location has a lot to do with the tourist boom, for Cartagena is only two hours away from Miami by jet. And price is also an important factor. Although it has its share of inflation and high prices, Colombia is still one of South America's least expensive destinations.

Cartagena has one of the most elegant gambling casinos in the Caribbean, and a new 400-room Cartagena Hilton will soon be added to an impressive roster of deluxe and first-class hotels that rise in the beach resort area of Bocagrande, just five minutes by taxi from the old Walled City with its wonders of 16th Century Spanish military architecture.

Life here is beach-centered. Most hotels overlook the wide, hard-packed beachfront. But a road separates the hostelries from the dark sands of the beach — for the oceanfront belongs to all the people.

Part of the enjoyment of learning to know the Colombians is sitting on a hotel terrace or an open-air cafe swilling Colombian rum punches, and watching the families who drive right down to the waterfront for picnics and a siesta in the sun.

One of the local drawing cards is the seafood, which brings people from as far as Bogota to linger over all-night dinner at some of the best restaurants in South America.

One of them, "La Fragata", is luxuriously appointed in a mansion which three centuries ago housed the Spanish military governor. Another sumptuous restaurant operation within the Old City will open soon and it will be managed by Hilton International. "Club de Pesca," located in a restored Spanish fort, has probably the most romantic natural setting of any restaurant in the world.

If your taste runs to watching fish and other marine life in their natural habitat, then turn to the Rosario Islands — just an hour by launch from Cartagena. This cluster of lovely keys and islets, where Colombian millionaires build their secluded vacation villas, is surrounded by crystal-clear waters and reefs teeming with multi-colored tropical fish, an ideal place for snorkeling, scuba diving and underwater photography.

Thanks to some enterprising local tour operators, you may rent your own island in the Rosarios for several days. Accommodations, limited to small groups of lucky beachcombers, are rustic but clean, with running water, and the constant ocean breeze for air-conditioning. Freshly-caught lobster, fish and crabs are featured at all meals, even at breakfast.

Cartagena, like Colombia, is a place of dramatic contrasts. After the back-to-nature peacefulness of the Rosarios, you might want a different kind of excitement. The narrow, balconied streets of the Old City teem at noon with armies of uniformed school children competing with fruit and oyster vendors for sidewalk space; in the old port, dozens of moored schooners filled with produce and fish make up a picturesque waterfront marketplace; there are throbbing discotheques where the local young people swing all night and grow ecstatic when they are joined by visitors; not far from Cartagena is La Boquilla, a beachfront fishing village where on Sundays you can have fresh fried fish and watch frenetic native dances of African origin such as the cumbia and the porro; and there are quiet places where one can walk beneath poinciana trees on a beach road and hear nothing but frogs.

With such a gamut of exciting things to do, see and hear, no wonder Cartagena is now the "in" place on the South American Caribbean Riviera.

British Rail pulls out old timers

Preparations are steaming ahead in Northwest England for a massive celebration of the 150th anniversary of the opening of the world's first inter-city railway line: the Liverpool and Manchester Railway, or LMR. The Rainhill Trials, held in 1829 to assess the potential of various steam locomotives for the line, will also be commemorated in a re-enactment by three working replicas of engines entered in the trials.

After being the only contestant to complete the 70-mile course — the distance between Liverpool and Manchester and back — the famous 'Rocket', built by Robert Stephenson with advice and help from his father, George, won the £500 prize. Its average speed over the trial course, completed on just under two miles of track from Rainhill over three days, was a startling 10 miles an hour.

The re-enactment involving the working replicas of the 'Rocket', 'Sans Pareil' and 'Novelty' will take place up and down the original Rainhill course, about 10 miles east of Liverpool on May 24, 25 and 26 (Spring Bank Holiday weekend). Each replica will pull three coaches, built in 1930 as replicas of 1830 coaches which still bore a strong resemblance to horse-drawn coaches in design. First-class coaches, although cramped, were plushly upholstered and enclosed; second-class coaches contained only wooden benches open to the elements; and third-class was even less comfortable.

At the 'Rocket 150' celebrations, the re-enactment will be followed by a cavalcade of trains including 30 steam engines, representing 150 years of inter-city travel right up to modern day high-speed trains. The cavalcade will travel up and down the original course from Rainhill, led by 'Lion', oldest working steam engine in the world, built in 1838.

Stands for 50,000 spectators will be erected along the trials course, and British Rail will run special trains from 23 cities and towns throughout Britain on May 24 and 26, and from 13 cities on the Sunday. A shuttle service will take passengers from Manchester and Liverpool to Rainhill: the re-enactment and cavalcade are expected to take three hours each afternoon.

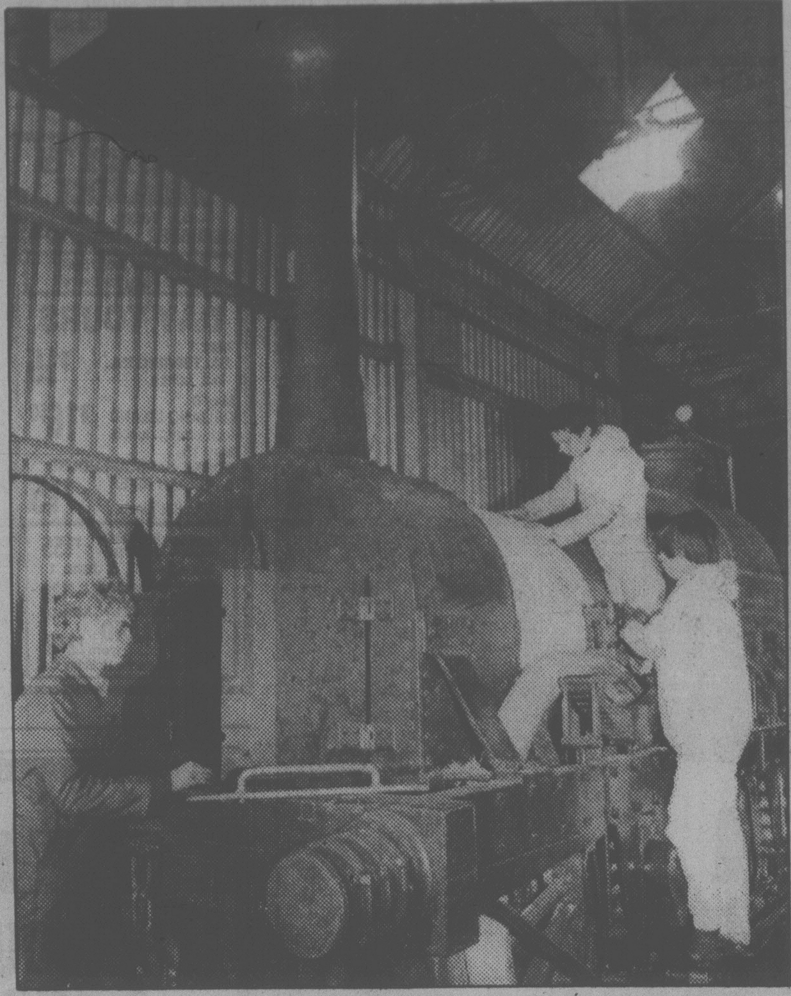
After the trials and subsequent exhibitions, the replica will be on permanent show at the Hackworth Museum, Shildon.

A replica of a fourth engine, 'Perseverance', which did not complete the course, has not been constructed for Rocket 150, but one of a surprising entry has: a 'Cyclopede', worked by two horses walking on a moving belt. According to the Liverpool Courier of October 7, 1829, it achieved "five miles an hour with about 50 persons clinging round the wagon".

Four stations along the line are being renovated: buildings at Edge Hill in Liverpool, Rainhill, Earlestown and Liverpool Road station — the Manchester terminus in 1830 — and the famous Skew Bridge at Rainhill have all been sandblasted to restore them to their original colour.

At Edge Hill, British Rail have demolished late 19th century additions to restore it as nearly as possible to its 1830's state. The station is the oldest in the world which has sold passenger tickets without a break.

A few miles down the line from Rainhill towards Manchester, a 'Tudor-style' waiting room at Earlestown, has been restored and renovated by unemployed youngsters, working in a government-sponsored community industry scheme. The station is completely unchanged since it was built in 1835, except that the pitch of the roof has been altered. It will house an exhibition until the end of the year, on the history of Ruston Diesels Limited at the nearby Vulcan Foundry, where one locomotive was built every two weeks for Pakistan, India or China from 1852 to 1952. A large collection of early locomotive drawings from the foundry will be displayed.



Workers renovate steam engine 'Lion' for anniversary

It is hoped that the three working replicas, and other rolling stock and locomotives from the cavalcade, will be on show at Spekeland Road freight depot, Liverpool, next to Edge Hill station during June. They are due to be exhibited at the Manchester terminus, Liverpool Road Station, in August and September.

The opening of the LMR line was celebrated on September 15, 1830, by a cavalcade of eight engines travelling from Crown Street, Liverpool, to Manchester. Unfortunately it was marred by the death of the President of the Board of Trade, who stepped in front of the 'Rocket' and was run down.

However, the line was a feat of engineering which astonished the world. It went through solid rock, and over a treacherous peat bog for 12 miles where rails were laid on a floating mattress of brushwood. Stephenson's dogged determination and engineering brilliance achieved a tremendous breakthrough in transport technology which deserves to be celebrated in style.

Special train and stand tickets can be bought from Rocket 150, British Rail, Room 405, Rail House, Lord Nelson Street, Liverpool. Only passengers with admission tickets will be able to travel on the shuttle trains, and British Rail stress that it will only be possible to view from the official stands as there will be no facilities for non-ticket holders.

Caribbean cuts costs in summer off-season

By SUZANNE DONNER

With the coming of spring in the North, the cost of Caribbean vacations is reduced. From the middle of April until the middle of December accommodations rates may be cut by as much as 60 percent, though 35 to 50 percent reductions are most common. And — according to the Caribbean Tourism Association — hotels, restaurants and shops are staying open to cater to off-season visitors. Moreover, a long calendar of events shows that there are plenty of things to do throughout the year.

The seasonal change means that rooms are easier to get, and that there are no waiting lines for tennis courts or golf courses. The one thing that does not change is the attractive weather: Temperatures in the Caribbean vary only slightly during the year; summer readings in the mid-80s with trade winds are common.

Not quite so quickly pointed out is the celebration of Hurricane Supplication Day July 28 or Hurricane Thanksgiving Day Oct. 20, in the Virgin Islands. The hurricanes have generally come in the late summer and fall; the association says that the damage from Hurricanes David and Frederick, the two major storms that struck in the islands beginning at the end of August last year, has been cleaned up.

It is therefore quite possible to take a vacation in the Caribbean, in luxury accommodations at a greatly reduced price, during the eight-month off season — even if the sun and sea are not as precious as in the winter.

Price reductions may also be obtained on condominium apartments and cottages as well as packages.

Visitors may join the festivities of Puerto Rico's Le Lo Lai Festival if they purchase a minimum stay of four nights (instead of the high-season minimum of seven nights) accommodations at one of the 30 participating hotels.

The festival is a continuing weekly series of five shows: Sunday's presentation is choral singing by university students; Monday's program is dance and music; Tuesday's a folkloric show; Thursday's an Afro-Caribbean show of dancers accompanied by drummers; and Friday's is called the Fiesta Jibara, after the Indians from whom the term "Le Lo Lai" comes.

Other parts of the package: a free bottle of rum, a round of golf, discounts for shopping, a discount for car rental and an admission to a discotheque.

Discount packages for Martinique, Guadeloupe and Saint-Barthelemy are known as "Fete Francaise"; the "Free Spree in the Sun" program applies to Aruba, Bonaire and Curacao.

Heavy calendar of events

A calendar of events during the eight-month off-season covers four pages. It opens with a listing April 14 to 19 for a week of calypso competition in St. Thomas, followed by carnival week April 20 through 26 (food fair, early morning tramp, and parades for children and adults) also in St. Thomas.

From May 11 through 17 is a festival of Puerto Rican dance.

In June there is the Bequia Whitsun Regatta in the Grenadines; a parade, picnic and dance for the Queen's official birthday on St. Kitts and the beginning of a three-week celebration, called the Crop-Over Festival, of the sugar cane harvest in Barbados.

July's calendar, of course, includes Bastille Day festivities in the French departments of Martinique and Guadeloupe, while Jamaica's Independence Day is Aug. 4 and the Dominican Republic celebrates restoration of independence on Aug. 16.

Labor Day picnics and boating mark the beginning of September in the United States Virgin Islands; on the 24th a pilgrimage to the shrine of the Virgin of Mercedes takes place in the Dominican Republic.

For many in the Caribbean the principal holiday in October is Columbus Day or Dia de la Raza. In the Cayman Islands, however, the last week of the month is a carnival that commemorates the pirate heritage of the islands.

During November the Dominican Convent in Old San Juan will be the site of a music festival.

There's more than just beach-strolling in Caribbean summer

Teacher layoffs loom?

A few local teachers may be sending out a May Day signal of distress next month if the Greater Victoria school board decides it must lay some of them off.

Any teacher to be released must be notified by mail by May 1.

A report prepared for the board says there is expected to be a decline of 850 students in the region's secondary schools this fall, the largest drop in recent years.

In the past, the board has avoided layoffs by not replacing teachers who retire or move away.

But because teachers in the secondary field are specialists it might not be possible to move them around to fill existing vacancies.

For example, an English teacher likely is not qualified to teach industrial arts.

The board will prepare seniority lists in case some layoffs are required.

Any tenured teacher must be given written notice at least 60 days prior to end of term June 30 if he or she is to be laid off in the next term.

Discussion on trade centre

Owners of land near Victoria's proposed trade and convention centre will get a chance to give their opinions on the project at an advisory planning commission meeting Tuesday.

The discussion is for information only.

A formal hearing on a rezoning application will be held in May.

Ald. William McElroy said council will have to decide before the May meeting if it wants to apply to downzone the site or amend its bylaw to allow the project to go ahead under the present zoning of harbor-commercial.

A convention centre can not be constructed with the present zoning under the existing bylaw.

The meeting Tuesday will be open to the public but only owners of adjacent property will be invited to speak.

Therrien named to CRTC post

OTTAWA (CP) — Real Therrien, 53, has been named vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission, the prime minister's office announced Tuesday.

Communications's Minister Francis Fox said that Therrien is "an ideal choice because of his vast experience with the CRTC."

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

The Lord is my Shepherd

I shall not want

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures

He restoreth my soul

He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake

Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death

I will fear no evil

For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff
they comfort me

before me in the
enemies

Thou anointest my head with oil

My cup runneth over

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart
and gay

Scattering sunshine
the way

You know how we love you
love you yet

Though God took you from us, we cannot forget.

God in his wisdom

The boon

And though the body
slumbers here

The soul is safe in heaven.

ODDS AND ENDS

Occasionally, readers of this column write asking for an explanation of some notations used in the games. here are the main ones: 0-0 means castles King side; 0-0-0 means castles Queen side; - means moves to; x means captures; ch. means check; ! means good move; ? means poor move.

One of my main interests in chess has centered around the solid opening play represented by Edgar Colle's innovations. The tenth edition of my "Colle System", explaining his line, his ideas and games, and with new diagrams, is now out. It is 40 pages longer than the ninth edition. For autographed copies at $5.50 each, write George Koltanowski, 1200 Gough Street, San Francisco. 94109.

SECOND CLARIN TOURNAMENT

This event, held in Buenos Aires in November and December of last year, was sponsored by the largest Argentinian newspaper. On paper, with two ex-World Champions and another nine top class Grandmasters, a fierce struggle seemed likely for first place. In fact, things turned out rather differently.

Bent Larsen of Denmank took an early lead, and only Boris Spassky had a chance of stopping him in the seventh round. Larsen played his favorite Caro-Kann Defense. Spassky sarificed the exchange with Larsen having a number of checks, which led to his advantage. Spassky resigned after the 39th move. After that, Larsen spurted to an easy victory, scoring 11 points out of 13. Of course he had some luck. (I wonder how one wins games without it!) Ulf Anderson, Boris Ivkov and Tigran Petrosian all blundered against him and Mikhael Najdorf let him off.

Najdorf who is (almost 70) of Argentina, Anderson of Sweden and Anthony Miles of England each scored 8. Let's see how Ivkov lost to Larsen:

WHITE: Ivkov: K-KN2; Queen on Q3; Knight on KB3; Pawns on QR4,QN5; Q5, K3, KB4, KN4 and KR3. (10 pieces).

BLACK: Larsen : King on KN2; Queen on QN7; Bishop on QB6, Pawns on QR2,QN3; Q2, K2, KB2, KN3 and KR4. (10 pieces).

33.K-N3?? (33.K-N1!) 33 . . . P-R5ch!; 34.NxP, (If 34.KxP,Q-B7ch; 35.K-N5,-P-B3 mate.) 34 . . . B-K8ch; 35.K-B3,BxN; White resigns.

The Chess Player, Ltd., 12 Burton Ave., Carlton, Nottingham, NG4 1PT England, is coming out with a book on this tournament. Price: $2.50.

Tire rim size protested

A Victoria man has asked the provincial consumer and corporate affairs ministry to investigate why the Ford Motor Company is selling new cars equipped with odd-sized spare tires and rims.

Doug Clements, of 3765 Casey Drive, said he bought two new Mercury Capris last year and later discovered the spare tire and rim in each car is an inch larger than the regular tires on the cars.

Clements said he understood at the time of purchase the spares were only good for limited use.

"But the different size makes them difficult to use even in an emergency situation," Clements says.

He said he tried to contact the Ford office in Vancouver but they refused to accept his call.

Clements subsequently phoned the company's head office in Ontario and was told the spares were approved by the federal government for weight, emission control, mileage and space reasons.

"I feel the bottom-line reason is to force consumers to purchase proper rims at an additional $51 each," he wrote in a letter to the ministry.

500 quakes: Harry ducks

SPIRIT LAKE, Wash. (CP) — Harry Truman, the crusty old owner of the Spirit Lake Resort at the base of Mount St. Helens, has moved his bed into the basement of his home because of the earthquakes rattling the volcano.

"I'll bet I've been through 500 earthquakes since this thing started, but none of them were like the last two," said Truman, 83.

Truman has refused to leave his lodge even though other residents were forced to evacuate when the peak in southwest Washington started erupting more than two weeks ago.

The two big quakes hit late Wednesday.

"First the place rocked from side to side, then the earthquake reversed directions and the place rocked fore and aft," Truman said. "I thought the building was coming down. You couldn't walk, you couldn't stand up. You sure as hell couldn't sleep. I took the bed and moved it into the basement. If you went through earthquakes like that, you'd move to the basement, too. You'd move to California."

Truman lives in an old two-storey building that contains his living quarters and the resort office.

He plans to open the resort when the spring thaw arrives even if the road to the mountain remains closed to all but area residents.

"If I get through the summer, I'll have completed my 54th winter here. Don't think I'm going to close this place."

Israeli armor begins to pull out

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli soldiers and armor have begun pulling out of the rocky hills of southern Lebanon and heading for home after a three-day cross-border thrust spurred by a Palestinian terror raid on an Israeli border farm.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv announced the withdrawal Friday as the government faced reported mounting opposition to the incursion from the United States, the United Nations and Lebanon.

In Washington, the U.S. state department said it has been informed by Israel that the pullout will take several days.

A UN spokesman in southern Lebanon confirmed that about 100 Israeli soldiers appeared to have withdrawn from positions near the Arab villages of Markabe and Shakra, a sector controlled by UN peacekeeping forces.

Spokesman Timor Goksel told The Associated Press in a telephone interview from UN headquarters at Naqoura, in southern Lebanon, that about 150 Israeli soldiers and 15 armored vehicles remain in the area.

UN sources said Israel poured at least 350 soldiers and two dozen armored vehicles over the border during the three-day incursion, which began Wednesday. They took up positions in a 17-kilometre north-south arc.

Seagram gets $2.3 billion in U.S. oil field sell-off

NEW YORK (AP) — Sun Co. Inc., the 10th-largest U.S. oil company, has signed a preliminary agreement to buy the U.S. oil and gas properties of the Montreal-based Seagram Co. Ltd., the world's biggest liquor distiller, for $2.3 billion.

The purchase, one of the largest in oil industry history, came as the Radnor, Pa.-based Sun stepped up its $730-million-a-year drive to increase its North American energy reserves.

Last year, Sun spent $300 million to buy Elk River Resources Co., a coal company with operations in Kentucky, West Virginia and Virginia.

Announcement of the preliminary agreement with Seagram was made by the two companies Friday night, three hours after the 5 p.m. deadline set by Sun on its offer had passed.

Sun and Seagram officials were talking right up until the deadline time at least, and maybe later at Seagram's New York offices, said Curt Swenson, a Seagram spokesman.

It is a complex deal involving a lot of money, said Sun spokesman Kurt van Vlandren. The deal also involves a lot of property: Seagram's U.S. oil and gas interests include more than 3 million acres of unexplored land.

The Seagram properties are owned by Texas Pacific Oil Co. Inc. of Dallas, Tex., which the Montreal company bought 17 years ago for $50 million in cash and payments of $216 million based on future oil output.

Van Vlandren said Sun is offering to spend up to $400 million over its $2.3-billion purchase price to develop the Texas Pacific properties, which are located primarily in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and the Rocky Mountain states.

Sun, which earned $699.9 million on sales of $10.8 billion last year, said it would pay for the Texas Pacific properties either in cash or a combination of cash and floating-rate notes.

The IOUs bearing rates of interest which are adjusted to reflect current money-market conditions.

Sun and Seagram said they signed a letter of intent and will enter into negotiations toward a definitive agreement on the purchase. But in order for the sale to become effective, a final agreement must be approved by their boards of directors by April 25, the companies said.

Under the preliminary agreement, Seagram will retain a 49-per-cent interest in Texas Pacific's unexplored acreage and also may keep a 25-per-cent stake in the company's oil- and gas-producing properties once undisclosed criteria are met.

Texas Pacific produces about 35,000 42-gallon barrels of oil and 130 million cubic feet of gas daily in the United States and has proved U.S. reserves of about 120 million barrels of oil and 300 billion cubic feet of gas.

Space flight 19 years old today

MOSCOW (UPI) — Two Soviet cosmonauts marked the 19th anniversary of manned space flight today aboard the orbiting Salyut 6 space laboratory.

Soyuz 35 cosmonauts Leonid Popov and Valery Ryumin were launched into orbit Wednesday and docked with the vast space lab Thursday evening.

In a brief recorded message beamed to Earth and broadcast on Soviet television, flight commander Popov recalled Yuri Gagarin's historic 89-minute flight on April 12, 1961.

"April 12 marks the date on which mankind's most cherished dream came true and also marks the triumph of Soviet science and technology," Popov said.

"We wish all peoples of the globe lasting peace."

April 12 is celebrated as Cosmonaut's Day in the Soviet Union.

$1.1 billion N.Y. transit strike ends

NEW YORK (AP) — Thousands of foot-sore New Yorkers hung up their walking shoes and climbed aboard buses and subways today as transit workers returned to the jobs they left 12 days ago, ending a strike that cost the city an estimated $1.1 billion.

The 35,000 workers were ordered back to their posts Friday night by President John Lawe of the Transport Workers Union after union leaders were deadlocked in a secret ballot over a tentative wage settlement.

The union membership still must ratify the package by mailed ballots within two weeks and dissident union leaders have promised to campaign against approval.

Some subways and buses were rolling by 10:30 p.m. EST and service was expected to be normal today.

Peru jets set for Cuba

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Peru put three jets on standby today for a flight to Cuba to evacuate 1,000 of the almost 11,000 Cubans besieging the Peruvian Embassy in Havana, reliable sources said.

They said the airlift of the refugees, whose situation the government called "critical," could begin sometime today.

The Foreign Ministry cautioned, however, that Cuba's visa denial to representatives of two world organizations that were to cooperate in the evacuation procedure "has hampered efforts towards a rapid exit of the refugees."

Diplomatic sources said Cuban leader Fidel Castro rejected the intervention of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and the European Immigration Commission, claiming the crisis was a bilateral affair involving Cuba and Peru.
